Going West
The Old Indian Drives
Thank Your Local Editor
They Killed Reilly

—By Arthur Brisbane—

GALLUP, N. M., March 14—Going through Colorado, New Mexico, and on to the Pacific for the hundredth time, is as interesting as on the first journey. You feel that you are in a BIG country.

A. L. Wathen, of the Interior Department of Indian irrigation service, in connection with looking after the Coolidge dam, says with conviction, "No place east of the Rocky mountains is fit to live in." He would not have said that when in the army, across the ocean, a while ago. He is sure of it now.

On both sides of the track, just now, is desert country, waiting for water to make it magnificently fertile. Plenty of water goes to waste in the ocean and gulf. A perfect cement road runs through the desert beside the track. Going up grade, a small automobile easily passes the train, the driver waving his hand in triumph.

An old Indian, with a bright orange ribbon tied around his hair, sits high on a load of baled alfalfa, driving two white horses. He does not wave his hand and probably has no high opinion of trains or white men. But his horses are hauling about three tons. He could not have hauled half that on the desert road. It will take him three or four days to deliver that load and get home with about $60. A low-priced automobile truck would do the work for him in a forenoon, carrying a bigger load.

Dante tried to describe heaven, but couldn't. In fact, his description is rather dull and doesn't compare with his description of hell. It is impossible to describe this Western country. The sky is different from other skies, as the ceiling of St. Peter's dome in Rome is different from the ceiling of a bungalow.

At Albuquerque, H. F. Pickerell is at the station. He is editor, T. M. Pepperday is publisher, of the Albuquerque Journal, which is a success. Wants you to know that the Rio Grande conservancy project, nothing to do with Boulder Dam, will soon irrigate 120,000 acres of fertile land above and below Albuquerque, providing jobs and prosperity. A natural gas main, on its way to Albuquerque, will secure the establishment of a big glass factory. Albuquerque, "healthiest place in the world, had 17,000 population a little while ago, has 35,000 now, and will soon double that."

Such an editor as Pickerell is a whole chamber of commerce in himself.

The value of an energetic local editor is not often fully appreciated by his community, nor is the value of his advertising columns appreciated by national advertisers, as they should be. His readers buy everything from paint on the roof to cement in the cellar floor, buy more automobiles per capita than city dwellers, have time to read about the latest products, clothes, food, time-saving devices, etc., and buy them.

An Indian sitting on the ground beating a little tomtom to attract attention, is indifferent .o population, glass works, or irrigation projects. He sells you for 25 cents a pipe with a face in front of its as good as anything that Hoya ever did. That sale makes his day a perfect success. Everything is comparative.

How grateful a nation should be that has for its chief worry the fact that it possesses TOO MUCH of everything. Too much oil is the oil problem. Too much wheat is the wheat problem. Too many acres of fertile land, too much water ready to irrigate thirsty acres, too much wealth in the soil, is the farm problem. To say that "He hath not dealt so with any people" is putting it mildly.

Unfortunately, we haven't too much INTELLIGENCE. Therefore we don't know enough to bring in millions more of the kind of people that created this country, to conserve the wheat, use the gasoline, buy second-hand cars that are the automobile industry's main market later buy the most expensive new cars.

This nation is great because it has 120,000,000 people with more than they need. It would be ten times as great if it had 240,000,000 people to consume the surplus, creating at home the markets for which we struggle abroad. . . .

In the dining car, early, you look at the paper and read that at about that hour keeper and witnesses in San Quentin prison will climb two flights of stairs outside an old brick building. Take Alphonse Reilly, 22 years old from his death cell and hang him in a room adjoining.

He killed a man, the state will kill him.

'OLD IRONSIDES' FLOATS AGAIN PROUDLY

Thousands Applaud Historic Frigate as She Quits Navy Drydock

While thousands cheered, including hundreds of school children who had contributed their pennies for reconstruction, the frigate Constitution ("Old Ironsides") was refloated today at Boston Navy Yard after nearly three years in drydock.

At 8:40 a. m. water began to pour into the big drydock where the world renowned frigate rested on hugh blocks. Fifty minutes later she was floating in the dock.

Then the navy tug Iwana hooped against the stern of "Old Ironsides," and at 10:24 the famous old vessel, which played such a prominent part in the War of 1812 against England, began to move. Ten minutes later, amid the cheers of school children and navy yard employes, the famous frigate was clear of the drydock.

The ship was towed two feet to a berth at Pier 2, west, and tied up. There the remainder of the job of reconstruction, consisting of stepping masts, placing spars and rigging her with sails, will be done.

While the hull of the Constitution was being moved, a little more than a stone's throw from the spot at which she was launched 134 years ago a navy band played patriotic airs.

Capt. Kemp of the tug Iwana stood on the stern of "Old Ironsides" and gave instructions to a large force of men aboard the vessel and ashore.

Among the persons of prominence who witnessed the removal of the ship were Rear Admiral Philip Andrews and Lieut. John A. Lord, who had charge of reconstructing the vessel.

A "dressing line" of colors was

"Old Ironsides" took to the water at the navy yard today after being in dry dock since 1927. At that time the old frigate was rotting away. Her reconstruction today is not complete, however, more than $200,000 being required for the work. In the photo water from the harbor can be seen pouring under her keel after the dock gates had been opened. (Staff photo.)

Winslow, commanding the United States naval armed guard aboard the American Yangtze Rapids Steamship Company's steamer Chipping, was wounded in the leg by a machine gun bullet during a clash between his guards and Chinese soldiers roaming the north bank of the Yangtze river 50 miles above Ichang.

Lieut. Winslow is registered in Lieut. Winslow is registered in the navy from Newport, R. I., and Boston, the son of Rear Admiral Winslow, retired.

The wounding of Lieut. Winslow was the result of a particularly vicious attack by lawless soldiers in which the latter used field pieces and machine guns, heavily bombarding several steamers, both Chinese and American, and paralyzing river traffic for several hours.

None of the other Americans aboard the Chiping participating in the skirmish was injured, although three Chinese members of the crew were seriously wounded during the barrage.

In all, five American Yangtze Rapids Company steamers were involved in the attack. Two Chinese vessels also figured.

Lieut. Winslow is a former Newport and Boston boy, was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1927. He comes from a family long distinguished for naval service.

His father is Rear Admiral Cameron McRae Winslow, retired, who was once naval aid to President Roosevelt and commander of the North Atlantic fleet. In the Spanish-American war, the elder Winslow was on Admiral Simpson's staff and was wounded and cited for "extraordinary heroism."

HUB RUM MEN IN PANIC

Speakeasies Clamp Down the Lid as They Face a Quiz on Milk

The Boston Bar Association today joined hands with Atty.-Gen. Warner in his investigation of Oliver B. Garrett, pensioned police liquor raider, and the sources of the alleged $225,000 wealth of Garrett and his wife.

By vote of its executive council, the influential lawyers' organization offered Warner its full co-operation and assistance, and the attorney - general promptly accepted.

A committee will be appointed by the Bar Association to assist in the probe, it was indicated.

The full membership of the association will be expected to aid, if a request by Warner is complied with, and should lawyers become involved in the Garrett inquiry, it is believed, the Bar Association will lend powerful assistance to the official probers.

With the Garrett investigation at its zenith, the lid was suddenly clamped today on every speakeasy in Roxbury, where the spotlight has frequently played during the public hearings at the State House.

Keepers of thirst - quenching places in that section of the city were reported bordering on panic, while from the State House came information that three speakeasy proprietors had been queried already in private as to what they paid for milk delivered, allegedly, from Garrett's farm.

PERCY REDDEN QUIZZED.

Percy Redden, brother of Mrs. Garrett, was closeted with Asst. Atty.-Gen. George B. Lourie for 20 minutes today, with a stenographer present. Another questioned was William E. Brennan, newspaperman.

Brennan, it is understood, was queried about Garrett's alleged statement at the time he was suddenly transferred from liquor squad duty to walking a beat, that he could "blow the lid off the department." Instead of exploding the waterlike at that time, Garrett retired on a pension.

Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson remained silent today in the face of a demand by Warner that he set a date on which he would submit to questioning as to why he kept Garrett on the liquor squad after branding his actions as suspicious and highly imprudent in a report to then Gov. Fuller, two years ago.

The former governor, virtually

INFORMATION OFFERED

Questioning of "Queen Polly" Levine and her ex-husband, Joseph Levine, alleged white slavers, and testimony by a State st. bootlegger, now loom as possible sources of further startling disclosures in the state's probe.

Scores of letters volunteering information were received by the attorney general and his staff.

Other Garrett case developments today are:

1—Federal income tax bureau gets transcript of testimony and begins scrutiny of bank deposits of the Garretts.

2—The state probers seek information on his reported gigantic racket in which, like milk from the Garrett farm, soft drinks were purveyed to unestimable places in the Hub, allegedly for a huge increase in price.

3—The investigators line up prospective witnesses to bare the entire Garrett wealth and to expose his confederates, if any.

4—It is revealed that plain clothes men are constantly on watch to prevent liquor and vice rings from silencing those who are ready to "squeal" to aid the probe.

5—The Ritz Hotel and Rawdy Boston cases may be re-opened as a result of statements by Francis LaCroix, who virtually linked the Hingham farm of the Garretts with "the Boston bootlegging fraternity."

LEVINE QUESTIONED.

Atty. Damon T. Hall, special assistant attorney-general, tried to bring Joseph Levine, who is under indictment with his former wife in the federal court in connection with an alleged white slave circuit, into LaCroix' testimony, but the witness denied that the Garrett milk wagon drivers, who distributed in Boston mentioned Levine's name.

Levine was questioned in the Attorney-General's office last week and fainted under the grilling, as he had also fainted upon being arrested. It is believed his exwife and he will be put on as witnesses with resumption of the probe Tuesday.

The Bar Association's pledge of support reached the Attorney-General in the following communication:

"Vote of the council of the Boston Bar Association in the city of Boston, March 13, 1930:

"Voted, that the secretary of the Bar Association of the city of Boston is hereby instructed to write to the Attorney-General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that the council of the Bar Association of the city of Boston, recognizing the importance of the investigation in which he is now engaged, offers him such co-operation in connection therewith as he may desire, and it may be able to give, and holds itself in readiness to assist the Attorney-General, by committee or otherwise, if he so desires, in any way that may be found practicable.

"Attest: L. Cushing Goodhue, secretary of the Bar Association of the City of Boston."

WARNER'S REPLY

Atty.-Gen. Warner replied:

"Hon. Herbert Parker, president, Boston Bar Association, Boston, Mass.:

"My Dear Mr. Parker:

"I am most grateful for the offer of assistance in the pending investigation, which was tendered me on behalf of the Bar Association of the city of Boston by the council of said association.

"The offer is especially gratifying to me, not only because of the tremendous influence which the Bar Association of the city of Boston exerts, but also because it is the first great civic body to pledge its support to me carrying out the legislative mandate.

"The Bar Association of the city of Boston can be of great assistance to me. Within its large membership there must be those who either personally or through their clients can give me valuable information.

ASKS FOR COMMITTEE

"While of course every attorney is bound to respect to the utmost the privilege existing between counsel and client, nevertheless attorneys who have clients who possess information of value can urge them to communicate it to me.

"Furthermore, if the Bar Association shall see fit to appoint a small committee of five or ten persons I might have recourse both for service and for assistance, I feel that such a committee might be of great service.

"I esteem highly the pledge of support and assistance which the Bar Association of the city of Boston has tendered.

"Very sincerely yours,

"JOSEPH E. WARNER."

Ex-Governor Fuller, who was linked with Wilson in Warner's defi, because of his quiescent acceptance of Wilson's 1928 report as final, was put squarely in the spotlight by Asst. Atty.-Gen. George R. Lourie with this supplement to Warner's statement:

"The Wilson report to Fuller and the state police report to Fuller on Garrett were never in the files of the attorney-general.

"The attorney-general never knew of such reports until the present investigation started, and those reports were obtained from the governor's file."

FEDERAL MEN BUSY.

Federal prosecutors intend to scrutinize not only the financial affairs of the Garretts, as brought out in evidence, but those involving the Hingham farm with Boston "sporting houses," and they promise grand jury action, if warranted, on possible white slave and liquor disclosures.

Asst. Atty.-Gen. Lourie asserts that, of 26 Garrett bank accounts, five alone totalled $85,000, while Atty. Hall says that the grand total was "tremendous."

Warner's statement was taken to mean at the State House that he is embarking on a probe of all the members of the headquarters of liquor squad and that he will proceed to make public conditions in the department that are positively startling.

With the resumption of the State House public hearings next Tuesday, the inquiry is believed due to expose the "higher-ups" in the Rubs organized corruption. One bootlegger with a profitable district and wealthy customers will testify, it is understood.

A clerk, however obscure, having already been established between Pine Grove Dairy Farm at Hingham and Boston, "sporting houses," according to the probers, the investigation is now primed to thrust far into this field.

"Too much has been disclosed to stop now," said Atty.-Gen. Warner. "I shall not stop as long as the Legislature gives me power to act, and I shall not stop until the last shred of evidence in any way bearing upon the pension award to Garrett has been ferreted out."

SEEK SOURCE OF WEALTH

The investigation will not close until every attempt has been made to solve, among other things, how Garrett made what tendered me on behalf of the Bar Association of the city of Boston by the council of said association.

"The offer is especially gratifying to me, not only because of the tremendous influence which the Bar Association of the city of Boston exerts, but also because it is the first great civic body to pledge its support to me carrying out the legislative mandate.

"The Bar Association of the city of Boston can be of great assistance to me. Within its large membership there must be those who either personally or through their clients can give me valuable information.

HUSTON PLACED LOBBY FUNDS WITH BROKER

Cash for Muscle Shoals on His Private Account, Says G. O. P. Chairman

Washington, March 15—Funds of the Tennessee River Improvement Association totaling $36,100 were kept on one of his private accounts with a New York stock brokerage concern, Claudius H. Huston told the Senate lobby committee.

Huston was president and chief money collector for this association before he resigned last August to become Republican national chairman.

In a stormy committee session, Huston revealed the unique method by which he kept track of monies contributed to the association to carry on its Muscle Shoals lobbying activities.

He testified that early in 1929 he got two checks totaling $36,100 from the Union Carbon Co., which is affiliated with the American Cyanamid Co. in bidding for Muscle Shoals.

Huston said these checks were deposited to one of his four private accounts with the brokerage firm of Blyth and Bonner. The transaction was carried on by his agent, W. E. Moore.

Later these funds were forwarded at request to Col. J. S. W. Worthington, who ran the Washington lobby office of the association.

Huston said he deposited the funds in this way because a broker's account is "more flexible" than a bank account, adding that it was a common practice in New York.

In reply to Senator Blaine (R.) of Wisconsin, the witness said these funds could not be used to buy stocks on margin without his specific authority. The committee did not ask whether he ever gave such authority.

SHOE TARIFF IN DOUBT AFTER LONG DEBATE

Senator Walsh Makes Brilliant Plea for Protection of U. S. Manufacturers

Washington, March 15—The shoe and leather tariff, on which the whole industry of New England pins its hope for future survival, is today hanging in the balance of an admittedly close division of Senate opinion.

Rejected six weeks ago by a wide margin, shoe tariff advocates made considerable gains, notably as a result of the long debate in the Senate, in which Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts made a fervent plea on behalf of this depressed industry.

"We have just listened to the fairest presentation of a tariff argument ever made in this chamber in our generation," declared Senator Norris, (R.), Nebraska, as Senator Walsh concluded his address, in which he presented to the view of his colleagues a pair of woman's shoes, one made in Europe and one in America, and defied anyone to tell which was which.

For more than two hours he held the close attention of his colleagues on both sides of the aisle as he described conditions in the industry in his own state. The members filled the chairs in the immediate vicinity of the place from which the Massachusetts Senator made his speech.

Senator Walsh said he would offer as an amendment for free hides, varying rates on leather lower than the rates in the House bill, a duty of 12½ per cent on women's and misses' shoes, and 7 per cent on men's, boys' and children's shoes.

He would vote, he said, for a 10 per cent duty on hides.

The amendment offered by Oddie of Nevada represented the demands of the cattle raiser for a protective duty on hides, and the rates in part compensatory and in part protective, which the proponents of the duty on hides were willing to concede to the leather and the boot and shoe industries.

The Oddie amendment carried a rate of four cents per pound on green hides and eight cents per pound on dry hides. The rates on leather and boots and shoes and rubbers were twice as much or more than as originally provided in the House bill.

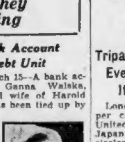
Walska's Bank Account Tied Up by Debt Unit

New York, March 15—A bank account here of Ganna Walska, opera singer, and wife of Harold F. McCormick, has been tied up by attachment for an alleged debt. Mme. Walska is now in Paris.



Ganna Walska

Her balance in the New York Trust Co. was attached on a writ issued to attorneys representing the Musical Courier.

The magazine asserted Mme. Walska contracted for a series of advertisements during an operatic tour and that when a bill for $2800 was submitted it was unpaid. Subsequent appeals for payment went unanswered, it is charged.

How much the singer has in the bank was not revealed. The attachment prevents the money being disturbed pending judgment.

Borah Has Passed Up $12,500 of Salary Boost

Washington, March 15 (AP)—It is disclosed that Senator Borah never has drawn the increase of $2500 a year in salary authorized for members of Congress five years ago.

Senator Borah

This came to light in discussing whether a law prohibiting members of Congress from holding an office for which they have voted salary increases would make the Idahoan ineligible for appointment to the Supreme Court as successor to Edward T. Sanford.

Borah has voted against all recent salary increase bills and is certain, he said in his friends, that he voted against the measure increasing Supreme Court salaries.

Nanette Guilford Rosen 'Opera Baby' Bankrupt

New York, March 15—Nanette Guilford, young Metropolitan opera star, who recently applied to divorce Max Rosen, concert violinist, has filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. Her liabilities are given at approximately $25,000, with no assets.

Nanette Guilford

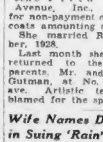
In 1927 Miss Guilford, known as the "baby prima donna," was sued by Russell Fitch Avenue, Inc., for non-payment of a bill for three coats amounting to $2528.

She married Rosen in November, 1928.

Last month she left Rosen and returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius L. Guilford, at No. 260 West 93d ave. Artistic temperament was blamed for the split.

Wife Names Doris Eaton in Suing 'Rain' Composer

Los Angeles, March 15—Nacio Herd Brown, gifted composer of "Singing in the Rain," the "Doll Dance" and other popular songs, has been made defendant in a separate maintenance suit brought by his wife, Mrs. Ruby Porter Brown, in superior court.



Doris Eaton

A torrential rain was falling when the action was filed.

Mrs. Brown alleges in her complaint that her husband on one occasion became so infatuated with Doris Eaton, film actress, that he followed her to New York.

Miss Eaton, in fact, was the divorced wife of Mr. Brown, having home, Mrs. Brown alleges.

LYNN CHURCH HIT BY FIRE

Fire destroyed the vestry and part of the altar of the uncompleted St. Francis Church at 104 Blossom st., Lynn, early today.

The fire was discovered by a passerby, who sent an alarm. Firemen conquered the blaze after a hard battle.

Attempts to locate the pastor, the Rev. Humbert S. Zampieri, who lives some distance from the church, were unavailing, before the fire was over and firemen were unable to locate the chalice. Fear was expressed that it may have been destroyed.

Damage was estimated at $3500.

U. S., JAPAN AND BRITAIN WILL SIGN PACT

Tripartite Agreement Assured Even Should France and Italy Wreck Big 5 Plan

London, March 15 (AP)—A 100 per cent agreement between the United States, Great Britain and Japan was said in naval conference circles today to be an accomplished fact as far as the delegations are concerned.

Approval by the home governments of the American-Japanese settlement which was concluded yesterday was said to be the only thing remaining to enable these three delegations to write finis to their naval conference difficulties.

For days these delegations have been as close to agreement that there was said to have been little between them. The provisional American - Japanese agreement, achieved by Senator Reed and Ambassador Matsudaira, is understood to have been the one thing needed to complete the circle.

Observers said that what this amounted to was that if this agreement is approved by the home governments, the United States, Great Britain and Japan will be in a position to sign a three-power pact at any minute this should seem desirable.

There remains the crisis surrounding France and Italy and the next move would seem to be up to these two.

The conference today was more or less marking time awaiting the arrival of Premier Tardieu from Paris for a conference with Prime Minister MacDonald tomorrow. Upon this important conversation may depend the outcome of the naval conference as far as a five-power pact for limitation is concerned.

The report of the American-Japanese settlement produced something of a sensation here, but what this settlement is no one in authority was prepared to state at this juncture.

Report had it that a compromise had been effected along the lines that the Japanese agreement to reduction in her claim for a 70 per cent ratio of 8-inch cruisers and would drop entirely her claim for a higher percentage of destroyers and submarines than she had expected.

But it should be emphasized that this report was unofficial and should be taken at its face value.

"Let Naval Envoys Alone," Said to Be Hoover Demand

Mr. Rowell said he visited the President yesterday as a member of a New York committee representing thirty organizations, asking for limitation of armament. The quotation was Mr. Hoover's reply, he said.

Further, Mr. Rowell said, the President "thinks we may get some actual mathematical reduction," although it may not be as great as expected.

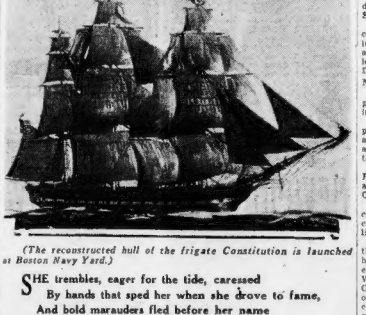
Flagship of the Fleet

By WIN BROOKS



(The reconstructed hull of the frigate Constitution is launched at Boston Navy Yard.)

SHE trembles, eager for the tide, caressed
By hands that sped her when she drove to fame,
And bold marauders fled before her name
And guns—when independence was her quest.
The salt sea bears her from the cradle rest,
This child of battle suckled in the flame
Of War and destiny. The waves reclaim
Their own, reborn, upon a heaving breast.

NOW give her spars and yards, and from her peak
Unfurl the flag she honored; give her sails
To lift her as a torch to light the weak
Processional of parley. Spirit quails,
That once stood fast, as quibbling statesmen meet.
So send her forth, the flagship of our fleet!

HERE, once, a spark of independence flared
To fire upon her decks, and spread to land
To rouse a people; these old decks were manned
By Preble's faithful and the hosts who dared
With Stewart, Hull and Bainbridge. This ship shared
With patriots, at liberty's command,
The nation's honor; and no weakling hand
Sought treaty where that honor was ensnared.

SO send her down to sea again, her sail
White token of the peace, her old guns bared
In friendly warning that for calm or gale
Our fathers' courage stands her helm, prepared.
Ay, step her masts in renaissance complete
And send her forth as flagship of the fleet!

'OLD IRONSIDES' FLOATS AGAIN!

suspended from stem to stern of the Constitution on temporary masts. A 15-star national ensign flew at fore and peak and a 15-star jack flew from the bowsprit.

The work of reconditioning "Old Ironsides" began June 18, 1927, thousands of persons, especially school children, contributed to the fund for rebuilding her.

The Constitution was a 44-gun frigate of 1576 tons, constructed by order of Congress because of Algerian depredations. During the war against Tripoli she was Preble's flagship. In 1805 she participated in three of the five bombardments of Tripoli.

Perhaps the most spectacular battle in which the Constitution engaged was with the English frigate Guerriere. On August 19, 1812, she encountered the Guerriere alone off Cape Race and, following a battle that lasted 25 minutes, put the English frigate out of business. The English lost 79 of their crew, the Americans 14. As the Guerriere was in such bad shape she could not be towed into port, she was sunk and the remainder of her crew taken aboard the "Old Ironsides" and brought to Boston.

BRITISH QUEEN PAYS VISIT TO BARROOM

London, March 15 (AP)—Great Britain's Queen knows considerably more of beer, bartenders, and barrooms today than she ever had known before.

She visited a British public house, counterpart of the old American saloon, and found out for herself some of the things of which so much has been written and spoken here and abroad.

Her comment upon leaving the bar-room was: "I have enjoyed myself tremendously. I think it is a splendid place, so cozy and homey."

The silence of astonishment and bashfulness fell upon the men in the crowded public house when the Queen, wearing a mauve gown, appeared behind the bar and looked around her with a friendly smile.

The men doffed their hats but said nothing, until an elderly man whispered to his neighbor: "Ain't she lovely?" The compliment did not escape the Queen, who laughingly acknowledged it and in so doing set the whole party at ease.

Determined to learn all about the beer shop trade Queen Mary addressed the bartender, a young man who conquered his bashfulness and replied to her query as to what was his job with the words, "to draw beer."

The public house was Anchor Inn in Somerstown, a slum district of North Central London. It is the "model" establishment conducted by the Rev. Raul Pellicoe, cousin of the famous Admiral Lord Jellicoe.

SHAPLEY GIVES HIS VIEWS ON NEW PLANET

Philadelphia, March 15 (AP)—Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatory, through whom the official announcement of the discovery of the new planet was made, told the Philadelphia Forum that the discovery may add to the knowledge sought by scientists of the origin of the solar system, and perhaps the size of the universe.

He said discovery of the planet should cause abandonment of the nebular-hypothesis of astral origins and declared that no known version of the nebular hypothesis could account for the appearance of a planet at this distance from a body the size of the sun.

He suggested that it be named "Kronos," after the mythological father of the six principal Greek gods.

Flagstaff, Ariz., March 15 (AP)—While astronomers scanned the heavens for a glimpse of the trans-Neptunian planet, newly discovered member of the solar system, Dr. V. M. Slipher, director of Lowell Observatory, announced today the "ninth world" had been observed as usual last night with delicate photographic lenses developed at the observatory.

The planet, first observed by Clyde Tombaugh, Lowell Observatory photographer, appeared as a "blotch of light" on a photographic plate. It later was seen by Prof. Slipher and Dr. C. O. Lampland, assistant director, who identified it as the long-sought trans-Neptunian body.

Dr. Slipher said that while the planet had been photographed scores of times since its discovery, "it will need to be observed regularly for months, perhaps years, in order to secure definite astronomical information concerning it."

BUSINESS JUMP IS REVEALED

Washington, March 15—A decided improvement in the dollar volume of business over recent weeks was disclosed in the Commerce Department review for the week ending March 8.

Dollar volume of business is reflected by the amount of checks presented for payment at the banks of the country. With the average from 1923 to 1925 as the basic 100, the index for the week of March 8 stood at 139.9 as compared to 109.6 in the preceding week.

While this was still somewhat lower than the corresponding week of 1929, it was considerably above the week of March 2, 1929.

Steel operations were only fractionally lower than in the preceding week, remaining somewhat below the 1929 level.

Building contracts in 37 states showed a tremendous increase over the preceding week, the index jumping from 66.0 to 139.4 and bringing such activities substantially ahead of the 1929 record.

CANADIAN BAN ON RUM FOR U. S. ASSURED

Ottawa, March 15 (AP)—Passage of the bill to prohibit clearances for craft carrying liquor to the United States seemed assured today after second reading in the House of Commons without a division.

The measure, introduced by Premier W. L. MacKenzie King, has the backing of the Conservative opposition, whose leader, R. B. Bennett, said he would support it though he took issue with the premier's argument.

C. G. Power, a Quebec Liberal, the only speaker in opposition, said he believed the effect would be to increase bootlegging and result in violence against Canadian citizens by United States revenue officers.

After declaring the Canadian government now acts as a connecting link between breweries and distilleries and United States rum-runners, Premier King challenged Parliament to defeat the bill.

"May I say," he continued, "that so perilous do I believe the situation I would no longer assume the responsibility in external affairs in this regard if I were not sure that I had the support of this Parliament.

"I think the dangers Lord Curzon foresaw, the dangers of possible difficult and delicate situations arising between Britain and the United States over rum-running on the Atlantic, are as nothing to the delicate and difficult situation that at any moment may arise on our international frontier if this thing is permitted to continue."

Formal Fashions Emphasize Grace and Softness for Big Events After Six

IF current fashions were to be described in a word the word would be "feminine"—written in lower case letters for daytime, and in large capitals for evening.

The really important characteristics of any season's modes are usually emphasized in fashions for the hours after six. Thus it is safe for you to assume that if you are a gracious lady during the afternoons of spring 1930—you should be an exceedingly graceful, softly and becomingly-clad creature for the formal occasion!

It's the texture as much as the waistline tuck or the elegant train that makes the evening frock smart this season. Sheer materials make their own silhouettes, crisp materials like taffeta make theirs, and moires and satins adapt to many sorts of feminine dressmaker ideas.

BUT after laces, chiffons, nets, printed taffetas, moires, satins and crepes are considered and the choice of material made, there are still many little details to settle upon.

For instance, what decolletage does most for you—among the U, V and strap types that continue smart? Should you go in for demureness, adopting the peplum—or be regal in a dress of Empire persuasion? Would you enjoy a bolero frock all season long—or would the slim bodice with a deep decolletage, front, back, or both, be better?

When it comes to colors you will remind yourself that frankly feminine effects dine and dance most fashionably.

AND whereas last year you might have been concerned with exotic tones, this year you will take seriously fragile blues and peach-pinks, light yellowed greens and so on to a fashionable, feminine triumph!

The spring-like frock pictured is of chiffon, an all-over design in shades of green. The skirt is ankle length, its swirling fullness achieved by circular sections; its high waistline belt is caught by a buckle of brilliants, the very new shallow V neckline ends in three soft flowers of the material. The small puff sleeves are new, youthful and charming.

Shrewd observers at the Southern resorts report that wherever you go in the daytime you see the short sleeves taking precedence over the long sleeves which were worn last year. The smart sleeve lengths range from the cap to elbow, and infinite variations of the cape theme are to be seen.

SLEEVELESS dresses are reserved almost exclusively for active sports and when they are worn elsewhere they are usually accompanied by jackets. The tiny set-in cap sleeve is the leader for sports. But it also appears with great chic as a sleeve for formal afternoon frocks.

The short puff sleeve has that delightfully naive quality that does well with higher waists. It is especially smart on "young things" in their last year of high school or the first year of college.

THE three-quarters and seven-eighths sleeves are much seen on town and afternoon dresses, and, of course, require a long glove, wrinkled at the wrist to supplement them.

Whether we would return to the Directoire period for other styles besides the demure puffed sleeve and the Empire waistline is a question now settled by the appearance of clever prints that recall Empire designs. In fact, one print reproduces a design whose motif was taken from a gown worn by the Empress Josephine. The well known bee motif adopted by Napoleon has been used as the basis of another design. Most of the designs are small and closely spaced.

CLUBWOMEN HEAR ABOUT 'NEW' HOME

The marked contrast presented by the "New Fashioned Home," was the subject of an address by Dr. Albert H. Gage of Wakefield, at the closing session of the youth conference of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Many of the external buttresses to the home life of a generation ago have been removed," he said; "such as the conventionalities, religion, authority and tradition.

"In their absence the home should be held together by internal spiritual ties of love and understanding."

Mrs. Potter, in extending the greetings of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, said: "The world is looking to America for moral leadership, and to the women of America to point the way."

Many leaders in club and college circles attended. Mrs. Robert E. Blood presided, introducing the guests of honor, who included Mrs. Frank G. Allen, wife of the governor; Mrs. Arthur Devens Potter, Mrs. Axel A. Packard, Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, Mrs. Frank P. Bennett, Jr., Mrs. Thomas J. Walker, all federation officials; Mrs. Lauren L. McMaster, chairman of the department; Mrs. Robert H. Reed, past chairman, and Mrs. Archibald M. Hume, chairman of the program of last year.

EAST COAST CO. BIGGEST N. E. PLANE DEALER

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Following closely upon the slashing of prices of airplanes built by the Curtiss-Wright group, comes the announcement that East Coast Aircraft Corp. of Boston Airport has been appointed exclusive sales distributor in New England of all the airplanes manufactured by Curtiss-Wright.

Coming, as it did, without the slightest word or rumor, the announcement, made by Frank LeMan, sales manager of East Coast, establishes the strongest chain of dealers ever in New England.

A trip to New York by Fred Ames, president of East Coast, and LeMan led to several conferences, and the midnight oil was burned last night making final arrangements.

East Coast now has sole rights to sell Travel Air, Keystone, Loening, Curtiss and Moth planes to dealers, both Curtiss and independents, in every state except Connecticut, which is generally considered New York state territory.

MANY DEALERS

Curtiss bases are now being operated in Boston, Providence, Hartford Bridgeport, Portland and Rockland. East Coast also has lined up Roy Keeley in Taunton; Sound Airways in New Bedford; Russell Boardman of Hyannis and Boston; Barnes Flying Service, of Westfield; Orange-Athol Flying Service; Wachusett Airways, of Fitchburg; New Hampshire Aircraft and Marine Corp.; Bob Fegg's company of Concord, N. H., and a company in Rhode Island.

The price reduction averaged 25 per cent of the former selling cost of Travel Air, Curtiss-Robertson and Moth, and while some planes were slashed more than this figure the rest hit absolute rock bottom. The Moth, a two-place open-cockpit sport-trainer, was clipped about $1000, down to $3650; the Travel Air six-place cabin monoplane, 425-horsepower Wasp engine, was cut an even $2000.

AT ROCK BOTTOM

Curtiss Robin, powered with an OX-5 motor, dropped $1505, and the Challenger-engined Robin, which holds the world's record for refueling flight, was cut a similar figure.

"While we are overjoyed at being appointed New England distributors for the Curtiss-Wright planes," said Ames, "I am sure that the price reduction was brought on by the closing of face on all the air lines throughout the country.

"But there isn't any question in my mind that the prices of these airplanes, considered among the best in the world, have reached their lowest level for the present. What will happen in the future, no one knows.

"These airplanes are in the great majority, powered with modern engines, and are the finest ships yet manufactured by their respective companies."

Barre, March 15—The old Holland House, a widely known 100-year-old landmark, was destroyed by fire when the town's only fire engine, a motor, became mired while responding to the alarm and did not get to the scene in time to be of any use.

GIRL MINISTER STILL MISSING

The Rev. Jewell Imhoff, attractive young girl minister of the Pentecostal faith, whose disappearance from Franklin, N. H., was believed to have been solved following a report she was with her mother in Edenburg, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, is still missing and is being sought throughout New England.

The 21-year-old brunette, a graduate of Nazarene College, Wollaston, resigned her pastorate at Franklin on March 1. Her mother, Mrs. Eva Redmond, according to a report from her family, has instituted a search for the girl.

Her stepfather, a wealthy farmer, expressed fears his daughter is suffering from amnesia as a result of mental strain. He admitted he had received a telegram from her, stating she was giving up her pastorate in New Hampshire and would return home for a rest. She never arrived at her home.

Miss Imhoff graduated from Nazarene College last June. During her senior year she suffered a nervous breakdown from overstudy, according to Mrs. Isabelle Morey, secretary of the Nazarene Church at Franklin, the young pastor seemed mentally upset when she resigned her position with the church.

Backs Textiles

Former Governor Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, candidate for U. S. senator, urges amending Sherman act to aid textile industry.

TEXTILES HURT BY TRUST LAW, BREWSTER SAYS

Providence, March 15—Modification of the Sherman anti-trust law is the solution of New England's industrial situation? said former Governor Ralph O. Brewster of Maine today at a meeting of the Southern New England Textile Club.

Brewster, formerly president for two years of the National Conference of Governors and now a candidate for United States Senator, said that conditions have greatly changed since the time the law was enacted.

"Such modification is imperatively required," said the former executive.

"The law designed to preserve competition in 1890," continued the speaker, "will mean the end of all competition under the conditions of 1930. Yes, the meat of 1890 is the poison of 1930."

In the opinion of Brewster, the day of big mergers is with us and must be faced. Many profound trusts in modern merchandising are being nullified by the Sherman Act, he said.

The former governor's suggestion was that trade agreements and combines should be permitted, although not mandatory.

"Competition may be continued along fair lines so long as any individual may desire," said the speaker. "Any combination that approaches the dominating position prohibited by the Sherman Act may choose dissolution or appropriate control.

"The Federal Trade Commission has demonstrated that industries have a very large capacity to regulate themselves."

"Permitting the co-operative control of various units in production and marketing, offers the possibility of a healthy industry with profits that shall be fair," he said.

"At the same time," he continued ,"it seems the only way in which small independent units may possibly survive. Yet, those scattered industries have been the glory and strength of America thus far."

Speaking of conditions in his own state, the ex-governor said:

"The small woolen industries of Maine are being gradually starved out. Their individual resources are utterly inadequate to meet the cut-throat competition from overshadowing units with which they are now faced."

SOMETIMES FIGURES DO LIE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

BOYS will be boys, even when they grow up to the brown derby stage and become press agents. The daily mail bag has yielded up a letter addressed to this department from the Messrs. Shubert's sprightly chancellor of publicity for home affairs. It is a gently chiding missive, calling attention to an error in our calculations upon what constitutes the season's longest run at a local playhouse. The letter might properly be listed under the general classification of "putting the editor in his place." Let Mr. Albert Josef Duffy now take to type:

• • •

"HONORED SIR—Several weeks ago, when I was starting the day right with my usual diligent perusal of the Boston Evening American's dramatic columns, I happened upon enthusiastic effusions commending the Copley Players for having hung up the season's long run record with 'The Middle Watch.' The elapsed time was eight weeks. Now, sir, may I, in the role of your official Attention Caller, point out that 'Little Accident' has rolled along in its modest way; and on Monday next will enter upon its ninth week at the Plymouth. This, therefore, is in the nature of an official notice that the longest run of the season has been accomplished by Mr. Thomas Mitchell, appearing in his own play, 'Little Accident,' (with matinees Wednesday and Saturday)."

Nicholas Young

• • •

WHILE Mr. Duffy's point of view is admirably taken and, apparently, well founded, he might be reminded that whatever glory there may be for "Little Accident" in achieving the season's longest run, far greater renown falls upon the victor for having been able to outdistance the astute Mr. Clive in terms of consecutive weeks. Few of the latter day Broadway producers have found it in their power to do this. And while "Little Accident" will undoubtedly enter upon its ninth week on Monday, there still remains another week of hard travel before that play can hope to match "The Middle Watch" in consecutive performances. What probably has escaped attention is the fact that during its eight weeks at the Copley "The Middle Watch" turned in three matinees every six days.

• • •

IT will be seen, therefore, that Mr. Duffy, in his enthusiasm over the popularity of "Little Accident," has not taken fully into account the important item of consecutive performances which in authentic metropolitan circles determines the endurance record of any attraction. Still, we are glad to accept him as tabulator in the theatrical marathon if he will only promise not to short change the next rival attraction out of eight performances—as he has innocently done in the case of "The Middle Watch."

PLAYS BARD'S GIRL ROLES

MARY HOLDER, of the Stratford-upon-Avon Festival Company, at the Hollis, March 24, has gained wide popularity by her charming and graceful interpretation of several favorite feminine characters in the Shakespearean repertory. This year she plays Mistress Ford in "The Merry Wives of Windsor"; Hero in "Much Ado About Nothing"; Maria in "Twelfth Night"; Calpurnia in "Julius Caesar"; Lady Macduff in "Macbeth"; Titania in "A Midsummer Night's Dream"; the Queen in Richard the Second," and Lady Montague in "Romeo and Juliet." Miss Holder is a native of South Africa and there became known as an actress and playwright before making her English debut with Sir Frank Benson. She has had wide experience in the Shakespearean drama in England, and was chosen by Sir Ben Greet to play Ophelia, Portia and Viola in his productions in Paris.

Musicians to Appear in Colonial Costume

The Eighteenth Century Symphony Orchestra, Raffaelo Martino, conductor, will be heard in Jordan Hall on Sunday afternoon, April 6. The soloist will be Betty Bird Higginson, soprano. Mrs. Higginson will be accompanied on a harpsichord. The orchestra will wear colonial costume and the program will be played by candlelight.

The concert will be given for the benefit of the headquarters and welfare fund of the Oliver Ames, Jr., Post 117 of the American Legion.

OPPOSITES DO OFT LIKE ONE ANOTHER

ALTHOUGH "The Chocolate Soldier" has had its biggest successes in England and America, its composer, Oscar Straus, had never seen it before in English until it was presented recently by the same company which will be seen at the Majestic Monday as the seventh and final feature of the Victor Herbert Festival.

Mr. Straus, now 60 years old and a resident of Vienna, was recently lured to this country to write the music for a screen operetta in Hollywood. He arrived in Gotham the day before the opening of "The Chocolate Soldier" at Jolson's Theater. Various engagements had been made for him, but Herr Straus insisted on attending the opening of his master composition. He occupied a box at the premiere and was introduced to the audience.

He expressed himself as genuinely delighted with the performance, as did also an American composer, the famous George Gershwin, who occupied a box behind Mr. Straus and confessed that he had never heard the operetta before.

In interviews during the three days that he spent in New York, Herr Straus said several times that he did not like jazz; nevertheless, warm friendship sprang up between him and Gershwin though the two represent opposite theories of musical composition, each of whom is great in his own way.

"The "My Hero" number in "The Chocolate Soldier" is, of course, one of the most famous waltzes ever written, but in addition, the score has innumerable numbers of delightful beauty, among them the charming "Letter Song."

ONLY BABY IN FIRST SHOW

MARILYN MILLER, the star of "Sally," showing at the Scollay Square Olympia, began her stage career at the age of five as a member of the "Five Columbians," the other four being her father, mother and sisters, and she has never left the footlights for any great length of time since. Billed as "Miss Sugarplum," an infant prodigy, she became the principal attraction of the troupe in tours through the United States and Europe.

Miss Miller was born in Evansville, Ind., her first name being a combination of Mary, her grandmother's name, and Lyn, her father's. When Marilyn was 14 she was dancing at the Embassy Club in London.

The New Play

MAJESTIC—"The Chocolate Soldier," in which Charles Purcell is featured. Marks the close of the local Victor Herbert Festival. An operetta based on Bernard Shaw's play, "Arms and the Man." Music by Oscar Straus; libretto by Leopold Jacobson and Rudolf Bernauer; English version by Stanislaus Stange. Included in the supporting cast are Alice McKenzie, John Dunsmure and Vera Ross. Staged by Milton Aborn; produced by the Shuberts.

SOUBRETTE'S WARDROBE JUST PIE FOR STAGE-STRUCK BOY

WHEN "A Night Off" opened at the Copley, Richard Whorf, who hasn't yet reached his 25th birthday, stepped into his 87th part. That only accounts for the professional engagements, for he can't remember a time when he wasn't acting.

• • •

FURTHERMORE, not an obstacle was placed in his way when he first expressed his childhood determination to go on the stage. A miniature stage was built for him, and he was allowed to delve into the mysteries of a trunkful of fascinating old costumes, props and stage jewelry that had come from the wardrobe of Marie Jansen, who long before Richard's day, had been the greatest soubrette in America. And although Richard's activities have broadened considerably since and he has sketched pen and inks, written plays and books and tried his hand at music, it's still to acting that he looks for his present and his future.

Richard Whorf

Perhaps the secret of his success is that in the extremely talented Whorf family, hailing from Winthrop, everybody has always been encouraged to "express himself." Youthful fads and fancies weren't suppressed—they grew and flourished.

Harry C. Whorf, the young man's father, is one of the best known designers in the field of commercial art. He originated electrically lighted floats for parades. Together with James Caldwood he wrote the operetta, "Bobby Shaftoe," which the First Corps Cadets took on tour. It was also he who staged the two mammoth historic pageants which drew thousands to the town of Winthrop some years ago.

Sarah Lee Whorf, Richard's mother, is a lecturer of note. When their three boys were growing up the Whorfs helped in every way to encourage their hobbies. John Whorf had a paint brush and palette from the time he was seven, and his first exhibit, from which the late great artist, John Singer Sargent purchased three water colors, was held when he was barely 18. Since then he has won his laurels both here and in Europe.

FAMOUS THESPIAN is Mr. Cohan. Famed for his comic roles, he now goes "straight," though his role in "Gambling" at the Tremont is morally off color. Sketch is by Artist Schmidt.

SYMPHONY IN ONLY THREE NUMBERS

By MOSES SMITH

THE program of this week's concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is overweighted at the bottom. Although the list includes only three pieces, and takes a bare hour and a half for performance, almost an hour of this time is consumed by the last number, Strauss' "Alpine" Symphony, which Boston first heard a little more than four years ago.

The novelty—and what is a Boston Symphony program without a novelty?—is a piece called "Assyrian Bas-Reliefs" by one Henri Martelli, contemporary Parisian composer. He is inspired by four bas-reliefs, which have come down to modern times and which are said to have adorned Assyrian royal halls. They give the titles, and presumably furnish mood and program, for the four parts of this composition: "A Winged Jinnee with the Head of an Eagle Before the Sacred Tree," "Dance," "Lion and Lioness in their Lair" and "The Army and Musicians of Ashurbanipal."

Perhaps with photographs of these reliefs furnished them, the listeners might have been able to make something out of Martelli's music. As it was they were mystified—and so, let us hasten to add, were we. Our objection is not to the noisiness of the score, for modern ears have become long-suffering. But this noise is not music. It is an ineffectual substitute for the one thing that vitalizes music—original, forceful ideas. Not all the orchestral skill, rhythmic device, or various tricks of the trade can compensate for this lack.

Strauss' lengthy tonal discourse on a mountain-climb is amazingly uneven music. Some of it is the great Strauss inheritor of the robe of the great line of German composers. Much of it is the turgid bombast of an absurdly inflated orchestra, or inconsequential padding. Yet it is good to hear for what it contains of the great Strauss, who is often a quiet Strauss. When he puffs loudest, as in the storm, he succeeds merely in being boresome.

The opening number is Maximilian Steinberg's free version of a sonata in G major by Galliard. The performances of the various pieces by Mr. Koussevitsky and his orchestra are less effective than usually.

Plays Remaining

George M. Cohan in "Gambling" at the Tremont. (Second week.) By ingenious methods Mr. Cohan unravels a murder mystery.

• • •

Fritz Leiber in Shakespearean repertoire at the Wilbur. (Second week.) Final week of Mr. Leiber's tilt with the classics.

• • •

"The New Moon" at the Shubert. (Fifth week.) Romance of old Louisiana set to an intriguing Romberg score.

• • •

"Little Accident" at the Plymouth. (Ninth week.) In which a young man accepts the problems of parenthood and has a rough time of it.

• • •

"A Night Off" at the Copley. (Second week.) Rich old Augustin Daly farce renews its youth. The last week.

MARILYN MILLER

MISS MILLER sings and dances superbly in "Sally" now at the Scollay Sq. Olympia.

BRINGS PLAY UP TO DATE

WALTER HAMPDEN, on deciding to act "Richelieu," felt that the play should be revised along lines of modern stage technic, and he entrusted this work to Arthur Goodrich who served him well by fashioning his great success, Caponsacchi, from Robert Browning's "The Ring and the Book." His "Richelieu" will be among his offerings at the Wilbur beginning March 24.

Walter Hampden

Bulwer wrote "Richelieu" when he was secure in his fame as a novelist with "The Last Days of Pompeii" and "Rienzi," and as a dramatist with his immensely popular plays, "The Lady of Lyons' and "Money." "Richelieu" passed into the repertoire of other leading American actors in due time—John McCullough and Lawrence Barrett among them—to find its supreme exponent in Edwin Booth, who made the character as singularly his own as Hamlet.

Shakespearean Players Subject of Lecture

Sir Archibald Flower, chairman of the board of governors of the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Stratford and the Shakespearean Players," in the lecture room of the Public Library on next Monday afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

Sir Archibald has devoted his time to the Shakespeare Memorial and the resident company of players known as the Stratford-Upon-Avon Festival Co.

THE STREET EVEN MUST 'GO GARBO'

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

WE rise to acclaim the box-office powers of Miss Greta Garbo. That is not a new thing under the sun, by any means; we have used the words before. But they must be repeated, now that Miss Garbo has settled all doubts as to her fate in the talkies, and for the past week has helped keep things humming in the Back Bay sector. Assuredly, Loew's State is making good its promises for the month of March; isn't Lawrence Tibbett to be heard in "The Rogue Song" next week?

• • •

IT will be an interesting thing to note—how will the Tibbett crowds compare with the queues outside the Loew playhouse on Massachusetts ave., during these "Anna Christie" days and evenings? The press agent avers that Mr. Tibbett's voice will prove to be the finest singing tones ever heard on screen. Behind his grand opera vocal cords is a story heralded as lavishly presented, with good folk in the cast. Certainly it will be a great feather in the Metropolitan star's cap if he can make this week's history repeat itself at the box-office. For Miss Garbo has brought them out, man, woman and child. At various hours of the day we have happened near the theater; always there were the sidewalk lines. Once the line was forming at 11 a. m., almost two hours before the picture was to start.

Lawrence Tibbett

AFTER seeing "Sarah and Son" at the Metropolitan, on Thursday, we sped over to the New B. F. Keith's to witness "Second Wife." And several ideas presented themselves for comparison, one a rather striking coincidence. Each is primarily a woman's picture. Meaning by that, a picture with a special appeal to women. Motherhood motivating the one photoplay; motherhood also motivating the other. A child an important figure in the one, and again a child looming large in the other. In each womanhood triumphs. There were other minor points that struck us to mind that afternoon; and this further fact stood out in bold relief—in each there was singing, and in each it was the same song!

• • •

AT the Metropolitan we had heard Ruth Chatterton render—in exquisite voice, too—the sweet cradle melody of Brahms. And so and behold! at Keith's Lila Lee, playing the lead opposite Conrad Nagel, sings the same piece. Rather an odd thing, don't you think? Especially when one considers other points of similarity, all of them, in our opinion, purely accidental.

• • •

JUST another thought. The new season is delivering to us more than the quota of sterling films, several of them to be accounted among the best of 1930 probably; and each better, considered on the basis of motion picture values than the best of 1929. Truly, the talkies are stepping forward fast.

PRODUCER PLANNING SEQUEL TO "TWO ARABIAN NIGHTS"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

NEW YORK, March 15—The snail-like progress of "Hell's Angels" has not deterred that determined young producer, Howard Hughes, from continuing as a film producer. Of course with young Hughes' bankroll a few million more or less does not really matter. His move is to make a sequel to "Two Arabian Nights," which really grossed plenty of money.

Louis Wolheim, still under contract to Caddo, will play one leading role, and there is talk that William Boyd will be borrowed from Pathe for the other principal male part. Hughes is going at the production with the same thoroughness that characterizes everything he does. He has brought Lew Lipton to Caddo from Paramount. Mr. Lipton begins an original story for the sequel.

Louella O. Parsons

We still hear that Howard is negotiating with First National to buy Bill Dove's contract although so far Warner Brothers have not agreed to any offers made by the Caddo company.

* * *

PRETTY blonde Marie Saxon, who made so many friends when she visited Hollywood with her husband Sid Silverman, is on the way to the Coast. Marie has just been signed by Winfield Sheehan for a series of Fox plays. She dances and sings and is a great favorite on the musical comedy stage in New York so that it would not surprise me to see the young woman headlined in one of the coming Fox operettas.

* * *

ALL the eyes of Hollywood were turned in the direction of Eric Von Stroheim to see what would happen when he was put to work on "Three Faces East," writing as well as acting. The last two jobs of Mr. Von Stroheim have ended so disastrously that many wagers were made that the Warner Brothers affiliation would soon end. Now, prepare for a surprise. Eric delivered the goods so well that he has just signed a long term contract with Warners which calls not only for acting but for writing and directing as well. I imagine the two latter talents will be only incidental and that Von Stroheim will be kept busy acting. His excursions into the directing field have usually resulted in trouble even though Von Stroheim is admittedly a genius.

* * *

THERE need be no doubt in the minds of anyone a the United Artists studios that William Farnum can speak lines correctly in "Madame Du Barry." He has had years of experience on the stage and he and the screen are old pals. Maybe that is why Joseph Schenck signed him to play in the important role in Norma Talmadge's next picture, "Madame Du Barry." Gilbert Roland, who has been Norma's leading man in her last three or four pictures, will not play opposite her in "Du Barry." Her leading man has not yet been selected, but there is some talk of Eugene O'Brien being given the part—largely because the dear public will memories of "Secrets" and "Smiling Through" have requested that Gene and Norma again be teamed.

* * *

THE husbands are certainly getting a break these days. James Rennie, husband of Dorothy Gish and well known stage actor, will play opposite Dorothy Mackaill in "The Girl of the Golden West." First National, it seems, has other plans for Sidney Blackmer, who was originally slated for the part. Harry Bannister, husband of the lovely Ann Harding, draws the second male lead. Dorothy Mackaill, should say, will have husbands to the left of her and husbands to the right of her.

* * *

PAUL GREGORY, singer, and well known on Broadway, is en route to Hollywood to play in "Whoopee." According to advices from the coast he is on his merry way and due to arrive in Hollywood shortly. Those of us who are also on our merry way realize how glad Mr. Gregory should be to see the one and only Hollywood. Young Gregory we are told has an unusually fine singing voice.

* * *

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random by an observer: Eddie Gribbin and Raoul Walsh at work in the Fox Hills. James Gleason getting a tooth pulled to be in readiness for his trip East. John Weaver, Peggy Wood, Clive Brook and Margaret Livingston lunching at the Hollywood Plaza. William Collier, Sr., and Al Hall swapping stories over the luncheon table at the Brown Derby. Bernice Claire and her director, William Seiter, discussing interesting newspaper headlines between scenes on the set. Worthy occupation. Thelma Todd and Louise Fazenda lunching together at the Roosevelt Blossom Room. Vina Delmar, well known author, making her appearance in Hollywood without being recognized. Hollywood all agog over the chance at last to see "Hell's Angels." That's all today, see you tomorrow.

STOOD THIRD FROM END

THIRD from the end in the front line is exactly where Maxie Fuller, the bad girl of "Gambling," focused attention some 10 years ago in "Apple Blossoms." Those were the days when the Johns brought her posies and tried to kid her about her blonde locks. Her name is Mary Philips. She always was one step ahead of the wisecrackers. Perhaps that is the reason she fits so well into the Cohan play, "Gambling," which is at the Tremont. To understand Miss Philips is to go back to New London, Conn., her home town. There she saw every play that tried out and there she learned that men must not be taken seriously.

Mary Philips

As a child she was told by the smart lads of the town that she would make a great secretary. So she studied dancing. Mary never believed the boys. She had her own life to lead and no male could guide her otherwise.

IT'S PLAYING THE SECOND FIDDLE

SHOULD a husband leave his wife, who hourly is expecting to become a mother, and go to the bedside of his first wife's dying son? This issue furnishes one of the dramatic situations in Radio Pictures' "Second Wife," now showing at the new B. F. Keith's Set, caused much discussion among RKO studio employes when the all-talking picture was being filmed. The question of which one was in the right was argued pro and con.

Conrad Nagel

Electricians, stage hands, property men, sound recording experts, all joined in the debates. In a few cases the talk grew so heated that blows were narrowly averted, so it is reported.

'ET TU, BRUTE' IS THE CRY

"JULIUS CAESAR" was excellently presented by the Fritz Leiber company at the Wilbur last night. This rich, old melodrama, of all Shakespeare's works is probably the one most often imperiled through its great passages being made commonplace by the practice of schoolboy or platform orator. But Mr. Leiber and his colleagues brush d away all the ranting, and memories of the "spouting" of laymen: the master dramatist's blank verse took on a new dress, a simple one; and a new beauty, a very impressive kind. This was an outstanding pleasure of the performances—that the characters were made very human to the audience, the story brought close to them, and the language given a rich and profound music of the trained voice.

Mr. Leiber was Mark Antony; not an high in merit as his other roles, but to be accounted a rare treat. Brutus was in the hands of John Burke, who turned in a fine bit of work. Hart Jenks was splendid as Caesar. Lawrence Cecil equally good as Cassius. Virginia Bronson produced a clever portrayal of Portia, and Kathryn Collier of Calpurnia.

TENOR FEARS NOT 'MIKE' NOR LENS

JOHN McCORMACK, world famous tenor, who through the medium of Fox-Movietone will be heard at the Majestic on Monday night, March 24, in "Song o' My Heart," has never known microphone or less fright. In this he is unlike most beginners before the camera. "I just forget it entirely and talk and sing as I would anywhere at all," he said recently.

John McCormack

"Singing for a picture is somewhat reminiscent of singing for the phonograph, only much more exciting. While the audience isn't there, you can feel its nearness. Instead of a group of 40 or 50 musicians which I have in making records, I see 40 or 50 electricians. The orchestra cannot be seen.

"But I am lost in wonder when I think of the millions who will hear me through this new tool of the theater. If I lived to be 300 years old and sang a concert every day in the week, I still couldn't begin to reach the vast audience I will have with this one picture.

"I will go to all countries in the world," Mr. McCormack continued, "and into every little town and hamlet from Mandalay to Montevideo. If, as has been said, singers' voices belong to the world, this certainly is the way to deliver."

THE GLITTER NOT ALWAYS THE GOLD

"GOLD DIGGING is the most over-rated profession in the world," says Winnie Lightner, star of the Warner Brothers production, "She Couldn't Say No," now at the Fenway and Washington St. Olympia. "Do not misunderstand me, I have neither the time nor the inclination to go in for it myself. But when I was assigned the role of Mabel in "Gold Diggers of Broadway," I investigated. I found that the much maligned show girl, to whom the profession of gold-digging is attributed, is usually a hard-working person, eager to get ahead on her own and perfectly willing to live without fur coats and limousines. During the dull season when she is not in a show, she also has her worries as far as the rent and other living expenses are concerned.

Winnie Lightner

"Believe me, the notion that wealthy men run around just simply aching to shower chorus girls with extravagant gifts is a notion. And a wild one at that."

Supporting Miss Lightner is a stage star who registered a hit in his first picture, and whose subsequent efforts have firmly established him as a "find" in the motion picture world. This is Chester Morris, who had never appeared on the screen until "Alibi" brought him to the attention of the industry.

CAREER URGED FOR WOMEN

CLARA BOW, featured in "Wings," at the Repertory beginning tomorrow, believes that every young woman should have a career.

Clara Bow

"I don't mean that all women should rush pellmell into business or the professions," Miss Bow said, "and I certainly do not think that married women should be afraid to stay at home occasionally. Marriage if properly managed should be a career in itself.

"However I do think that if a married woman can afford to hire her housework done she should seek some interest outside her home rather than accept the emptiness of social routine.

COUNT NOW OF 'NO ACCOUNT'

AMERICA has done much for, and with, Erich von Stroheim. Before coming from Austria where, among other things he was a court chamberlain to the former Austrian Emperor, Von Stroheim labored under the name of Count Erich von Stroheim Hans Carl Maria von Stroheim.

Several members of the Austrian nobility were on Stroheim's dressing room guests during the production of "The Great Gabbo," his first talking picture, with whom he spoke at least seven different languages or dialects. "The Great Gabbo" is now showing at the Modern and Beacon. Betty Compton is featured with Von Stroheim.

Daring Story of Eternal Love Triangle

Ardeth Carroll, beauty, lives in the drab home of her Aunt Stella. Neil Burke, downstairs, claims Ardeth as his. She is uncertain. She yearns for a fuller life. She quarrels with her cousin, Bet, whose room she shares. Ardeth sees the man of her dreams, Ken Gleason. Neil is furiously jealous. Jeannette Parker, society girl, plans to use Ardeth in a scheme for revenge. She opens a shop and engages Ardeth to run it. Ardeth sees that she can never marry Neil. Ken comes to the shop and meets Ardeth. Both are secretly impressed.

CHAPTER 8

HAD Jeanette been less absorbed in her own affairs the next day, she might have noticed that her faithful Man Friday looked a trifle forlorn. There was a wistful droop to Ardeth's young mouth. A very distinct dimming of the flame-like quality about her.

But Jeanette was happily absorbed with a perfumery salesman all morning; expanding to glowing importance under his subtle flattery.

"He said my shop was smarter than anything he had seen west of New York, Ardeth," she confided when the wily salesman had left. "Said it reminded him of those exclusive little Parisian places."

In the middle of the afternoon Jeanette hurried into her hat and furs.

"I'm off to Mary Eastwood's tea," she explained. "Ardeth, I don't see why we can't mix different perfumes together and sell them as individual scents. That's an idea! I'll run a small ad in the Sunday papers. 'Have your personality expressed in your elusive fragrance.' I don't believe most people can tell one scent from another half the time!"

She went away with knit brows, contemplating the matter with the intense gravity of one who packs a world burden.

At six, as Ardeth was closing the store, Ken Gleason walked in.

"I came to drive Miss Parker home—" he explained easily.

Nothing in the girl's composed manner to betray the thumping of her heart as she saw his tall figure.

"But she isn't here. A tea—"

The face of the young fellow dropped and his tone was as regretful as though he had not heard Jeanette planning to do this very thing last night.

"Always the way, when I try to be a good boy scout and do my good deed for the day!" he said plaintively, with a side glance to see if she would smile. "Well—see here, Miss Carroll—" as though the idea just presented itself, "don't you think you should sub for Jennie? Ah—don't let my noble impulse count for nothing!"

Girl-like, her thoughts had flown to her clothes. This black georgette she had made herself. Here—that was all right. But her old blue coat with the matted fur collar—the fabric gloves. How Ken see her at such disadvantages?

"Oh, no—don't bother . . I catch my street car just a block below."

Then all of her convincing arguments went hollow. She was seated beside Ken in his blue car while he steered it through 6 o'clock traffic.

A melting spring night. The last sunshine had just left the tops of the tall buildings. The sky was a quiet, depthless green with little rosy ripples of cloud running through it like the pattern in moire silk. There was a salt tingle in the air which brought a picture of the ocean runing high and green outside the Heads.

Perhaps it brought that message to the man, for he turned the car with an inquiring little glance at the girl beside him.

"A little ride out to the beach?" Then, as she opened her lips to protest, "Please—I'll still get you home

PLAN COLONIAL ACT FOR LEGION

A colonial touch, in keeping with the spirit of the tercentenary celebration, will be lent to the annual national convention of the American Legion to be held in Boston next October. This will be accomplished through the legion auxiliary, who have just completed arrangements for a singing group of women, known as the Pilgrim Processional, to stage a special program.

These women are from Plymouth and the nucleus of their membership is from the group that took a leading part in the tercentenary celebration at Plymouth in 1920.

They will wear the garb of the colonial settlers of that first Massachusetts settlement and their program and songs will be in keeping with a pageant spectacle representative of colonial days. In addition, however, they will sing a special song for the tercentenary celebration.

A car needs a home. Have you a garage for rent? Tell about it and give location in the Want Rent Ads. That's the way to find it.

FRIENDS SEE BURKE'S JOB IN DANGER

Finance Commission's Probe Will Be Centered on "Expenditures"

As the Boston finance commission prepared today to start its investigation into "school expenditures," friends of Supt. Jeremiah E. Burke were rallying to his side for what they term will be an attempt to oust him. The superintendent completes a six-year term in April and his friends anticipate a battle to have him reappointed.

No further particulars regarding the finance commission's probe were forthcoming today. Chairman Frank A. Goodwin, in announcing the decision of his board to conduct the probe, merely said: "We have decided to investigate school expenditures." He refused to amplify on this statement.

Mayor Curley was criticized by Senator Frank W. Osborne of Lynn, chairman of the legislative committee on municipal finance, for not informing the committee of Goodwin's letter criticizing school construction which he had received before he spoke in favor of the $15,000,000 school-building program.

SULLIVAN DENIES WASTE

"Why didn't Mayor Curley tell the legislative committee about the letter sent by Goodwin when he appeared before us to favor the school building program," Osborne said. "He said nothing to us, although the letter was sent to him on February 28. Perhaps he will explain that."

Goodwin's charges of "waste and delay in school construction" were denied in a statement issued by Alexander M. Sullivan, business manager of the school committee. Goodwin had been the committee's board of apportionment, of which Sullivan is a member, to blame, the business manager disclaimed any responsibility.

Sullivan charged that "cheap politicians and grafters" had attempted to "foist an old brewery on the city as a school supply building.

OPPOSED TO BONDING

Francis G. Gray, member of the school committee, announced that he is opposed to the bonding of the $15,000,000 for the school building program. He apparently is the only member of the committee who is in favor of abandoning the present pay-as-you-go policy in connection with the three-year construction program.

Asst. Supt. Michael J. Downey asserted that the apportionment board "welcomes immediate investigation."

Other members of the board, with the exception of Business Manager Sullivan, refused to discuss the Goodwin charges.

Dr. Burke has been superintendent of schools since 1921. He heads the board of apportionment and was the target for a blast from former Chairman Slattery. He comes up in April for reappointment. His salary is $12,000 a year.

Governors Guests at Templar Lunch

Governor Allen of Massachusetts and Governor Case of Rhode Island were guest speakers at the March luncheon o fthe Knights Templar at the Boston City Club.

Governor Allen was introduced by Commander-in-Chief Charles F. White of the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island and spoke briefly. Governor Case praised the record of his State and claimed it to have been the first to adopt the principles of true democracy.

ALLEN TO JOIN IN PROTEST OF SOVIET DRIVE

Will Speak With Mayor Curley and Others in Faneuil Hall on Anti-Church Crusade

One meeting in Boston and four in New York are the outstanding protest gatherings scheduled for tomorrow, as part of a nation-wide demonstration against the Soviet anti-religion crusade.

The Boston session will be in the afternoon in Faneuil Hall. In New York Protestants, Jews and Catholics will congregate at various meetings.

A defense of the present Russian situation will be made at another New York meeting, with the principal address by Prof. Henry Elmer Barnes of Smith College, author of the "Twilight of Christianity," hailed as the outstanding atheistic work of the century.

Governor Allen, Mayor Curley, Atty-Gen. Warner, Congressman John W. McCormack, Dr. Frederick Harlan Page, Rabbi Harry Levi, Rabbi H. H. Rabenovits and a representative of the Boston Catholic diocese will voice the indignation of city, state and church at the latest atrocities in Russia in Faneuil Hall addresses.

The meeting is one of hundreds which will be held throughout the United States and Europe. It is hoped that such a public display of disapproval will help to put a stop to the seizure of churches which has already resulted in the ousting of thousands of priests, rabbis and ministers, Samuel Kalesky will preside.

Fair for Sunday, Warmer Monday

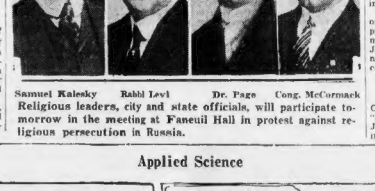
Slightly warmer weather is predicted for tomorrow by the weatherman, who said today rising temperature will be kept down by east winds. Clear skies and sunshine are expected, with the possibility of warmer weather Monday.

Boston's minimum today was 21, while the coldest spot in New England was Greenville, Me., with four below.

Aged Druggist Is Fined in Rum Case

Found guilty of liquor selling, Everett S. Dodge, Malden's octogenarian druggist, with a store at 148 Ruckman st., Everett, was fined $100 in Malden District Court by Judge Davis, who vacated the sentence until today when Dodge will enter an appeal.

Protest Persecution



Samuel Kalesky Rabbi Levi Dr. Page Cong. McCormack

Religious leaders, city and state officials, will participate tomorrow in the meeting at Faneuil Hall in protest against religious persecution in Russia.

Squeezing Under Tax Deadline

Thousands joined in the last minute rush to get their federal income tax returns filed before the curtain dropped today. This is part of the throng that gathered at the Federal Reserve Banks, where clerks worked feverishly to handle the flood of returns. (Staff photo.)

CURLEY PLANS HEALTH FUND

Mayor Curley has inaugurated a campaign to found a fund for the maintenance and perpetuity of the George Robert White Health Fund units.

The nucleus of the foundation, a gift of $40,000 to the city made by the late George O. Hovey of Gloucester, will if the plans and ambitions of Mayor Curley mature, be swelled to $5,000,000 before he completes his present term of office.

In conference with Judge William M. Prest of the Suffolk Probate Court and John T. Morse, Jr., of Needham, named as a trustee of the Hovey will, Mayor Curley impressed on them the desirability of making the bequest of $40,000 the start of a vitally needed foundation for the support of the health units.

One Person Killed in Every 17 Minutes During Last Year

One person was killed every 17 minutes in the United States last year, according to a statement made by Eben S. Draper, chairman of the safety committee of Boston Automobile Club.

He said reports compiled by American Automobile Association show 31,500 persons were killed in auto accidents, an increase of 12 per cent over 1928.

"This increase," he said, "is especially significant when it is considered that motor vehicle registrations increased only 8 per cent in the same period. This means the gain in fatalities was 4 per cent more than increase in registrations."

DYING AFTER BEATING

Suffering from the effects of a beating, alleged to have been administered in a suite on Hemenway st., Back Bay, a man is dying at Boston City Hospital with a fractured skull, injuries to his back and stomach.

A second man, Lawrence C. Harrison, 44, of New York City, is under arrest at Back Bay police station charged with drunkenness. He was taken from the same apartment. Lieut Edward R. Fallon of Back Bay police station is investigating the battle.

A telephone call from the janitor of the building brought a squad of police to the scene. The injured man is either John McGunnigle or John Burke, police said. An all night party is believed to have preceded the battle.

Plan "Jackson Night"

The Tufts chapter of Sigma Omega Psi fraternity will hold a "Jackson Night," to which all the Jewish women of Jackson will be invited, on Monday evening.

VOTE TO CALL DR. BROUGHER

By a unanimous vote, the more than 800 members of the church and congregation of Tremont Temple Baptist Church signified their approval of calling Rev. Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Oakland, Cal., to the pastorate here, left vacant last July with the resignation of Dr. Joseph C. Manning.

Leonard H. Rhoden, chairman of the board of deacons and moderator at the special meeting, expressed his approval of the unanimous vote in enthusiastic terms, congratulating the church body on its unity and predicting that, with the arrival of the new pastor, who is a national figure in the Baptist denomination, Tremont Temple will enter upon a new and glorious era.

It is generally believed that Dr. Brougher will accept the call to the Boston church, as representatives of the Temple were in conference with him on the matter last month.

Cop Admits He Hit Prisoner 4 Times

Patrolman Horace Hill of the Lynn police department, who is facing trial Tuesday on charges growing out of the clubbing of Osmond Melanson, testified in Lynn district court that he struck the prisoner but four times.

Melanson is being tried on charges of assault on a policeman.

Thirty stitches were taken in his head after the alleged beating which aroused citizens of Lynn and caused Mayor J. Fred Manning to start a probe.

G. O. Woods, City Assessor, Is Dead

George O. Woods, 61, assistant assessor of the City of Boston, died at Boston City Hospital, after three months' illness.

He had been living with a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Kennedy, at 232 East Quantium st., Atlantic, where the funeral will be held, Monday afternoon, with burial in Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

PRISON LABOR RAPPED AT HEARING

Massachusetts Industrial Commission Hears Many Proposals at Public Hearing

Lifting of the burden of taxation to enable Massachusetts industry to compete with industry in other sections of the country, and to encourage new business to settle here, is one of the recommendations under consideration by the Massachusetts industrial commission.

This was indicated at the first public hearing held by the body in the State House.

Rep. Thomas Smith, Jr., of Fall River, advocating the advertising of textile and shoe manufacturing plants with their available supply of skilled labor, which have been abandoned, to bring new and varied industries into the state, brought the major attention at the hearing.

He also urged recommendation of Federal legislation to equalize and unify hours of labor and working conditions and restrictions, by which Massachusetts could successfully meet her fellow states on an equal footing.

PRISON LABOR HIT

Reps. Edward J. Kelley and Joseph W. Leyden of Worcester spoke of prison labor in its competition with outside free labor, declaring prison labor was responsible for a serious unemployment in Massachusetts in the field of manufactured products.

Rep. James J. Twohig of South Boston, urging that industry share the burden of unemployment with the public, asked that industrial leaders be called into conference and be called upon to put on two extra men in each of the departments of their business, until the unemployment period is over.

James R. Egan, former Boston election commissioner, declared it is about time for "city and State officials to stop their bluffing" on unemployment. "They are all a bluff," he said. "The mayor of Boston is bluffing. Why didn't he appoint a committee here for a remedy? Because he is bluffing."

JOYCE SPEAKS

Martin T. Joyce, secretary-treasurer and legislative agent of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor, asserted that there could be no unemployment aid expected from the Legislature. Speaking on prison labor, he pointed to the cost of convicts in building the new State prison at Norfolk.

Nathan A. Heller, chairman of the Boston overseers of public welfare, representing Mayor Curley, said that the number of unemployed women over 40 years of age is increasing alarmingly. One reason for this is probably the greater efficiency of the younger worker, he said.

Mrs. Lillian C. Dixon, representing the People's Protective League, said there seemed to be no place at all for the woman of more than 40 to work, adding that she undergrowing out of the clubbing of Osmond Melanson, testified in Lynn district court that he struck the prisoner but four times.

Melanson is being tried on charges of assault on a policeman.

Thirty stitches were taken in his head after the alleged beating which aroused citizens of Lynn and caused Mayor J. Fred Manning to start a probe.

G. O. Woods, City Assessor, Is Dead

George O. Woods, 61, assistant assessor of the City of Boston, died at Boston City Hospital, after three months' illness.

He had been living with a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Kennedy, at 232 East Quantium st., Atlantic, where the funeral will be held, Monday afternoon, with burial in Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

Wendell Phillips Thorp of Squantum urged passage of his bill for insurance against unemployment, old age pensions and restriction of immigration for five years.

The hearing was adjourned, to be resumed in various other places throughout the State.

Gen. E. Leroy Sweetser, commissioner of labor and industries and a member of the commission, presided.

MILTON VOTES ON 45 ITEMS

The remaining 45 articles in the Milton town warrant will be disposed of today at the adjourned town meeting, with $361,997 in appropriations to be voted on.

Charles S. Pierce, vice-president of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company will be moderator at the session today.

Four major projects will be considered. The new town office building, to cost $95,000; a new six-grade school building on Eliot st.; the creation of a business zone on land bordering the Neponset river, and the East Milton Branch Library.

GANGSTER'S ARREST FOILS ATTEMPT TO PUT RACKETEER 'ON SPOT'

WOMAN SAID TO BE LURE OF GANG

Fleese in Auto When Timely Arrival of Police Saves Intended Victim

What police say was an attempt to put a well known Charlestown racketeer "on the spot" in which a Medford and Roxbury woman was playing the leading part, was frustrated early today in Frawley st, near Huntington ave., Roxbury, by Sergt. John A. Willard and Special Officers Thomas Keating and John Barthel of the special service.

The man who was to be "put on the spot" was brought in police headquarters heavily guarded and three young men, who gave Boston addresses but whom local authorities believe are members of a New York gang, were taken to the City Prison. A loaded revolver was found on one.

The arrest of the trio caused a furore in Boston gangland, as police say that all three members of the gang apprehended, have information to the killing of Anthony Rizzo whose bullet-ridden body was found in the basement of a Prince st. tenement house three weeks ago Rizzo was alleged to have been a North End bootlegger.

The men under arrest were to appear in municipal court today.

The woman who made a getaway in her automobile when police appeared, is well known to them.

WOMAN WALKED AHEAD

The man who was to be "put on the spot," police say, is Gilbert Crosby of Charlestown and Somerville. Crosby had been visiting friends in Frawley st., Roxbury, and upon leaving the house the woman in question walked ahead of him. Sergeant Willard and his two assistants were patrolling in Frawley st., in their auto. Their attention was attracted to Crosby, who they mistook for someone else.

As they were about to approach Crosby, a machine drew up with curtains drawn. By this time Sergt. Willard was questioning Crosby. The girl in the case, upon finding that Crosby was talking to police officers, whom she recognized, rushed to her car and drove down Huntington ave.

The other car slowed, but seeing the girl depart, turned their machine about and followed her.

HOLDUP TRIO

Sergt. Willard, with Officers Keating and Barthel, produced their guns and ordered the car to stop. Sergt. Willard frisked each man and on Toskane, found a nickel-plated, 32-calibre revolver, he says.

Crosby was taken to headquarters with the three suspects.

Crosby, police say, was a pal of the dead Anthony Rizzo. Both were engaged in the rum running and hijacking business, police say. Crosby has served time in state prison and is reported to be one of the real racketeers in the Boston rum game.

Tell the Dean, Student Trouble Recipe

Dean E. W. Lord — Carl Mydams — Maurice Pelter — Roger Hertwell

Dean Everett W. Lord of Boston University school of business administration knew students had troubles so he developed the idea of hearing their woes and giving them counsel. But Dean Lord had no idea of the extent and variety of troubles he would encounter. Love, health, finances and what not, he finds, play a big part in the lives of the boys. Carl Mydams, Maurice Pelter and Roger Hertwell are seen asking questions of the dean. (Staff photo.)

VOLUNTEERED AS DEATH COURIER

James A. Fay of Charlestown Met His Death on Voluntary Mission as Runner

Mothers were the "second line of defense" in the World War, as in all wars. Now the Government is going to send to France, that they may view the last resting place of their hero sons, the Gold Star mothers of America, those mothers whose sons made the supreme sacrifice. Today the Boston Evening American presents the 17th in a series of biographical sketches of heroes who gave their lives in the war—sketches made by the Gold Star mothers or widows themselves.

James A. Fay, 22-year-old son of Mrs. Susan E. Fay of 3 Mead st. ct., Charlestown, was a fighter. He went overseas with Co. A of the 101st. Engineers of the 26th Division.

Fay had dropped his work in the Navy Yard at Charlestown, which would have exempted him, and signed for war service. He had been at the Mexican border with the national guard troops.

The boy's 75-year-old mother has a service medal showing that the youth went through five major battles. He was killed on active duty, under unusual circumstances.

During a heavy German barrage, a message was ordered sent ahead in an important situation. Two runners had been killed and a request was made for a volunteer.

Fay, then known as "Fay, the Fighter," volunteered and got the message through. On the return to his own company he was killed.

Fay had once before been wounded and told his friends he was glad to get out of the hospital and back into action.

The young man wrote home frequently, and allotted nearly all of his pay to his mother each month. He studied his military books and was generally regarded as a model soldier.

Mayor Curley, in dedicating the Fay sq. at the junction of Bunker Hill, Main and Medford sts, Charlestown, in 1920, said:

"Fay, the Fighter, was a boy of wonderful courage."

In Monday's Boston Evening American the war story of James F. Walsh of South Boston will be reviewed.

STUDENT WOES DEAN'S BURDEN

Health, finances, love complaints, scholastic difficulties and church matters are being poured into the ears of Dean Everett W. Lord of the school of business administration, Boston University.

Now he isn't certain whether he is still enthusiastic over his idea to be father confessor to his students.

In past years, Dean Lord held to his office and students with a sudden urge to fill someone's ear with their troubles could not reach him easily. This year he sits at a desk in the men's study room and gives counsel in such types of complaint as, "I'm sliding in my grades because I'm in love."

Amputated Leg Valued at $25,000

An amputated leg is worth almost $25,000 to its owner, a jury in Judge Philip J. O'Connell's session of the superior civil court at East Cambridge decided in awarding that amount of damages to Albert W. Dillon, Watertown building contractor. The verdict included damages for other injuries.

Dillon in his suit against George T. and James L. Bell, claimed that on July 12, 1928, he was knocked down by a truck owned by the defendants while it was being backed into an excavation in Canning st., Watertown. At the hospital where Dillon was taken it was found necessary to amputate one of his legs.

A group of lawyers, opposed to William M. Butler's statement on prohibition have proposed William G. Thompson, who acquired international fame through his association with the defence counsel in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate.

Within a few days a delegation will confer with him in an effort to persuade him to enter the contest.

Thompson is regarded as one of the ablest members of the legal profession in the country. His liberal views are entirely in keeping with the theories of Democrats in the North. He is wet and was one of the most active supporters of Gov. Smith in this state.

ORDERS SWAMP HUB FACTORY

An increased demand, both in America and in foreign countries, is reported for the new Gillette razor and blades. An extra crew of 800 has been added in the past few weeks to take care of the orders, but the demands far exceed the present manufactured supply.

As a result of the demand, the company has decided to fill all American orders before sending any large quantity of its products overseas.

This healthy business condition at the Gillette factory is taken as an another indication of improving business conditions, although this concern itself has never suffered business depressions or losses in its entire 28 years.

The concern's initial production of 51 razors and 14 packages of blades in 1903, subsequently has grown in 1,000,000 razors and 10,000,000 blade packs a year.

This New England industry, which turns out fully 75 per cent of all safety razors in the world, is bringing great sums to this section. The 14 acres of floor space, employing 3500 men and women, is the scene of a 24-hour activity.

The 1930 business year is expected to be the "greatest era in our history," today predicted Frank J. Fahey, general manager.

Paul H Hanus, founder of the Harvard University graduate school of education, was honored on his 75th birthday by more than 100 of his closest friends, who tendered him a dinner at the Hotel Commander, Cambridge. Mrs. Hanus was also present and was given a bouquet of flowers.

Abraham Flexner was in charge of the arrangements. The guests included Dean Henry W. Holmes of the graduate school of education, Supt. Ballou of the Washington schools, Samuel J. Eliot, Mrs. James J. Storrow, Commissioner Payson Smith of the state department of education, Henry Morgenthau, C. N. Greenough, Meyer Bloomfield, Frank Brockner, Francis B. Peabody and Paul J. Saxe.

Saugus Police Chief Wins 'Arrest Suit'

Roland L. Mansfield, chief of the Saugus police force, was acquitted in Essex County Superior Civil Court in Salem by a jury who heard the suit of Armond J. Bourque, alias Burke, Lynn, against the police official.

Bourque is alleged to have attempted to take a car from a Saugus garage without first going through certain formalities of papers from the police on regaining possession of an auto.

SENATORS LAUD REFERENDUM ON WARFARE

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service

Washington, March 15 Those members of Congress who are concerned with promoting the peace of the world have joined in lauding the constitutional amendment advocated by the Hearst newspapers to provide a referendum vote on the people before the United States wages war.

The proposed amendment would make it impossible for the Government, except after a referendum vote of the people

1—To declare or wage any war except in defense of territories and possessions of the United States, and

2—To form any alliance or agreement with any foreign nation or group of nations obligating the United States to participate in or confer on wars not having to do with the defense of the territories or possessions of the United States.

Senator Brookhart (R.) of Iowa, who served as a colonel in the World War, was so enthusiastic over the idea he announced he would prepare later a resolution incorporating the proposal.

The referendum principle is the great principle of free government, he declared. "Its application to the declaration of war means world peace.

"It would logically follow that if this principle be adopted all alliances or agreements which would involve war should also be submitted to a referendum."

DEFENSE ASPECT

At the same time a warning was sounded that no objection to the proposal would have to be so considered and regulated that no danger would exist to the United States through a sudden, aggressive policy by a foreign power.

It was pointed out that the delay incident to a referendum vote in case of imminent national peril would be provided for in the present military defensive force into action.

DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 47

Once more we hark back to early Colonial days with today's illustration of a primitive tin basin somewhat tastefully painted and decorated.

The owner of the dish attributes it originally to Governor Bradford, stating that he brought it with him from England in 1620. This may be the case, although inware was extremely rare in the early 1600's. Curator Dow of the New England Society for the Preservation of Antiques states that wood and pewter were the most common materials used in household articles, followed by brass and Delft ware. The first tinware mentioning inware are dated after 1650.

The basin shown has been used for generations as a fruit tray. In later years it was used as a woman's workbasket for sewing materials. It is owned by Mrs L. B. H. Peruzzi of 283 Boylston st., Boston, a direct descendant of Governor Bradford.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photograph of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association, are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, provided the owner lives in Greater Boston Address the "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

Letters From Readers

America's Records Not All Desirable

Editor Boston American:

The United States is the richest, proudest, freest country in the world. It has more millionaires than any other country, the largest number of murderers in the world, the greatest number of unemployed in the world the highest percentage of insane asylums in the world Its alien population leads the world, and its prize-fighters, movie pictures, radio, jazz, divorces and lady gun guzzlers are also at the fore

HARRY CURTIS

League Opposed At Most Forums

Editor Boston American:

After carefully watching debates in Boston at the different Sunday evening forums, held in the interests of young people, mostly students, I have been surprised to find three-fourths of them are against the League of Nations and World Court.

How to account for this I do not know. There is some professor in one of the colleges who is a strong enemy of these agents for future peace of the world. He has great influence among them and is evidently charging them with his objections to these movements.

They also argued that 35 years ago bowing to prize fighting was illegal in almost every state in the union. This is now legal and every night in the week, including women like to witness a prize fight. The fighting instinct is more evident in the younger generation than the past generation.

HENRY T. SIMPSON.

Biographers Leave Nothing Settled

Editor Boston American:

This is the age of getting used to anything. Everything is unsettled. A writer attacked the life of Gladstone five or more years ago. He tried to reverse decisions and was handled by the son of W. E. Gladstone who has just died. This effort failed to change established truth.

Now Leon Ulica, a mining engineer, has come out with a blast about Columbus, stating that he was a pirate. A new life of Lincoln says his boyhood was spent in a regular house with glass windows, when he was brought up in a log cabin with no glass windows. Now we have a new life of Byron, with many of the shadows left out. Keats was rescued from misrepresentations some time ago by Amy Lowell.

So one might go on. This chronic upsetting of old biographies with a lot of imagination thrown in proves that agitation is in the air, for just as soon as you get anything settled some one comes along and gives it a kick Where are we at?

Prohibition Debate Has Endless Claims

Editor Boston American:

In your Letters to the Editor column, you are having a lot of prohibition fireworks. You certainly expect two minds to think alike. Legislators ought to read again and again Article VI of the Constitution, which reads in part as follows: "That all legislative members, judicial and executive officers both of the United States and several states shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support the Constitution of the United States."

Here is another subject from Maine, where it is claimed that conditions are worse since "the 18th amendment was enacted In that state, extract drinkers and drug takers are increasing in numbers

Another says: "Let the government sell liquor and get the revenue that has fallen into the hands of bootleggers."

But another says: "Canada's experience in government control should be a warning to the United States"; and in Canada there is no such thing as government control, it is rather government sale

Another says: "Fifty per cent more workers are in factories than ever before." Both sides claim everything.

G. K. LANCASTER.

Alice Generous To College Men

Editor Boston American:

The death of Edward F. Albee, famous vaudeville promoter, will be sincerely mourned by the alumni and undergraduates of St. Stephens College, Barrytown, N. Y., a college connected with Columbia University. His generous benefactions to this educational institution, the gift of a large building named after him and other marks of his abiding interest in the cause, showed that he was always anxious and responsive to meet the support of agencies that would give the young men of today a chance of success through education.

In his earlier life, he had few advantages in the town in Maine, where he first saw the light of day. He knew the value of an education He joined a circus and for seven years endured the hardship and thrills of the itinerant life. When the time came for him to help others surmount the difficulties that he fought, he smoothed the way for them by giving liberally to the above college. Hundreds in this institution will cherish his memory and his deeds of kindness to individual students

AN ALUMNUS.

Pastor Commended For Healthy Advice

Editor Boston American:

It is not often in Boston churches that we get a bushel of healthy advice, as was given in the noon address of Dr. Karl Reiland, this past week, in King's Chapel. This minister is rector of St George's Church, New York He talked against the man who is always working you in his own interests, who uses you as his tool or, as we say in common parlance, is constantly pulling your leg, proverbially stingy, never going out of his way to give a helping hand. He designated that man, the one mile man

The two-mile man—designations taken from the Bible—is wanted more than ever in this age. He is the person who goes two miles with you when it is only necessary that he go one mile, who puts himself out for your benefit, who, when you offer him the cigar does not give you the gall of the chicken and keep the second joint for himself, who does not take all your cigars and go off by himself and smoke what he buys—in other words, shares with you.

This point was admirably developed by the preacher and, if we had more two-mile men with us in Boston, it would become more than the Hub of human popularity. More power to such addresses!

St. Patrick's Day to Be Observed

Postmaster-General Walter F. Brown of the United States will be among the prominent speakers to address the Charitable Irish Society Monday evening at Hotel Somerset, where will be celebrated and observed St. Patrick's Day. The postmaster will respond to the toast, "The United States of America."

Besides the greetings of state and city, as brought by Governor Allen and Mayor Curley, the meaning of "The Day We Celebrate" will be brought out by Hon. John F Crosby, former district attorney of New York graduate of Georgetown and Harvard Law School

Celebrating this year his 193d birthday, having been founded in 1737 by a little group of Bostonians of Irish birth or lineage, the Charitable Irish Society feels that with nearly two centuries to its credit it is impelled to as distinctive as possible an anniversary this year.

Pilot Editor on Justice Taft

With the death of former Chief Justice Taft, American Catholics have lost one of their staunchest judicial friends Throughout his career in the Supreme Court Mr Taft treated matters affecting Catholics with true judicial impartiality, and was responsible in many cases for having just verdicts returned in favor of the church. —Pilot.

Time Does Not Dim 'Pilate's Daughter'

MISS GERTRUDE SHELLEY
Vestal Virgin

ALICE BRAWLEY
Claudia, Pilate's Daughter

MARY RUSSELL
Pilate's wife

For twenty-eight consecutive years, this religious play has been given during the lenten season at the Mission church in Roxbury. Year after year this creation of Father F. L. Kenzel's has been revived and improved. Each year sees some scenic surprise or some new and better way of presenting the story. There are always new faces in old familiar parts. This year there is a new Claudia in the person of Miss Alice Brawley, and Miss Mary Russell in her premier as the wife of Pilate. Those who estimate how many people have seen this play of miracle and Messiah say that the audiences have averaged 25,000 each year. Some special and startling effects have been added to the storm and lightning and there is also a wonderful fountain effect.

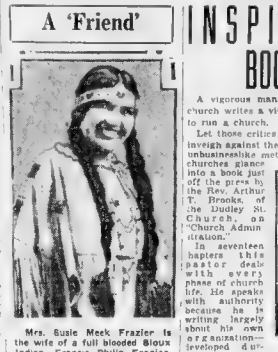
A 'Friend'



Mrs. Susie Meek Frazier is the wife of a full blooded Sioux Indian, Francis Philip Frazier, and she is of the Sac and Fox tribe. Both are missionaries and are traveling about New England and the East trying to interest people in a religious work carried on by the American Friends in Oklahoma. They are talented and accomplished, and will give an Indian program at the Twentieth Century Club rooms Tuesday evening.

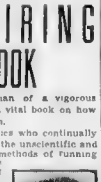
INSPIRING BOOK

A vigorous man of a vigorous church writes a vital book on how to run a church.

Let those critics who continually inveigh against the unscientific and unbusinesslike methods of running churches glance into a book just off the press by Rev. Arthur T. Brooks, of the Dudley St. Church, on "Church Administration."



Dr. Brooks

In seventeen chapters this pastor deals with every phase of church life. He speaks with authority because he is writing largely about his own organization—developed during the last nine years.

Church activities -which include so that is going on during seven days of the week -have grown from five in 1921 to over sixty in 1930. A community house built three years ago is today a beehive of activity day and evening

One finds no loose threads, no muddled situation, no class conflicts, or overlapping time. In the pastors office on large charts tacked to the wall are daily, hourly, schedules all prepared for the entire church year and drawn up in September when the season begins. Of course there are vacant spaces for newer thought of activities, but the majority of events for May are put down in September.

From the lower baths in the basement to the crowded roof playground a busy throng develops and enjoys. Every devout individuals.

A forward written by Alton L. Miller, of Harvard university throws light on the purpose and place of this book.

Among other things Professor Miller remarks:

"We should always be on the lookout for methods that are successfully solving the new problems of a new age.

"The Dudley St. Church is on a business basis, and is one of the greatest seven day churches in the country.

"There seem to be four elements —The Man—the Message, the Method and the Master.

"As a method the church has come to believe that any and every method that supplies a spiritual contact is well pleasing unto God.

Among the many activities are card playing and dancing.

Dr Brooks can best be described through his own statement under the heading "Author's word"

"New churches for old, new inspirations for jaded progress, new joy in the greatest work in the world, the ministry of Jesus Christ – are the allurements that the new order of practical methods combined with rich spiritual vision offers those churches that will follow the plans."

The chapters were first given in a course on church administration by Dr. Brooks at the Gordon College of Theology and Missions

Among other matters one chapter is devoted to church advertising by letter, poster, speech, illumination and by newspapers. Dr. Brooks, who advertises regularly in local church pages, advises his readers to learn what news is and then see that items are fed to the press for free advertising possible with all live churches. He then deals with effective paid advertising.

He believes a special name for a church has value as a symbol—such as "The Church of the Open Door," "The Church by the Side of the Road," or, as in his own case, "The Singing Church."

With all the secular activities Dr Brooks points out that the membership of his church is increasing, with scarcely an equal in the whole state of Massachusetts.

The book is printed by The Judson Press.

REV. WILLIAMS ON RUSSIAN SITUATION

While many devout people are assembling this afternoon at Faneuil Hall for the purpose of making a protest against religious persecution in Russia, others may be reading an article by the Rev. David Rhys Williams in the current number of the Christian Register Mr. Williams is the minister of the First Unitarian Church of Rochester N Y and has written a book on the Russian Revolution. He studied conditions in Russia several years ago He asks those who believe the worst about the present Russian government to remember what life was like under the czars. Dr. Williams believes that most which is called persecution is a natural though somewhat severe readjustment from the old order. He quotes from a recent interview with the chief patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church in Russia, and he gives answers to a questionnaire sent to the Greek Orthodox priests.

Q—Is it true that clergymen and churchgoers have been subjected to repression in their religious belief, arrested, exiled, etc?

A—Repression by the Soviet government against bogus bishops and clergymen has been applied, not for their religious belief, but for antigovernment acts, just as against other citizens.

Mr. Williams concludes with "No, we need not worry about the status of religion in Russia Real religion there now has a greater chance than ever before What we need to worry about is the status of religion here at home."

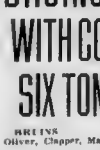
By BILL GRIMES

AS the playoffs begin next week, it is too late for the Rossmen to let down and for that reason, the Bruin-Detroit battle at the Garden tonight, promises to be one of the hardest fought games of the season.

The Chicago Blackhawks put an end to the Bruins' undefeated string and as the Stanley Cup holders have already established a record for points which could stand for years to come, other than their natural desire to win, there is little incentive for Boston.



Bill Grimes

But the Bruins cannot afford to rest up, for they will start to defend their world's championship next Thursday in Montreal against the Maroons. They must carry on at top speed and with Manager Art Ross back at the helm, they will be playing as furiously as though they were battling for a play-off position, instead of leading the other contenders by fourteen games.

As the outcome of tonight's game will not effect the standing of either of the contending clubs, thousands of fans, who should be restoring their vitality for the Maroon series, will be in attendance hoping for a repetition of the Red Shore-Rusty Hughes fracas which was the highlight of the last Bruin-Cougar game at the Garden.

Weiland Seeks to Keep on Top as High Scorer

The Bruins did not take kindly to the Chicago victory which gave the Hawks an even break with the world's champions for the season. They are in a belligerent mood due to their long hard trip! Chicago and such and the spoiling of their opportunity to break about the only record not already in their possession.

Cooney Weiland will bear watching tonight. He is out to top all opponents for goal getting honors. He is now on even terms with Nels Stewart and unless the Maroon star gors wild tonight against Toronto which will wind up the season for the Montrealers, Cooney should grab the honors, for the Bruins play Rangers once on Tuesday.

And incidentally, Dit Clapper is only two goals back of Weiland and Stewart, so Boston has an excellent chance to finish one-two.

Tiny Thompson has been bothered by a bad hand since the first practice scrimmage the Bruins held with Harvard. He was chopped on the back of his right hand during a mix up in front of the Bruin net and the injury has not responded to treatment.

In the first period of the Hawks game at the Garden this week, he stopped a shot with the injured hand and suffered severely during the rest of the game, in spite of the fact that he wore an extra pad on the back of his right hand glove. The injury is so severe that Tiny has had trouble holding his stick and has been unable to shift his war club with his usual agility.

Oliver and Galbraith on Wings for Bruins

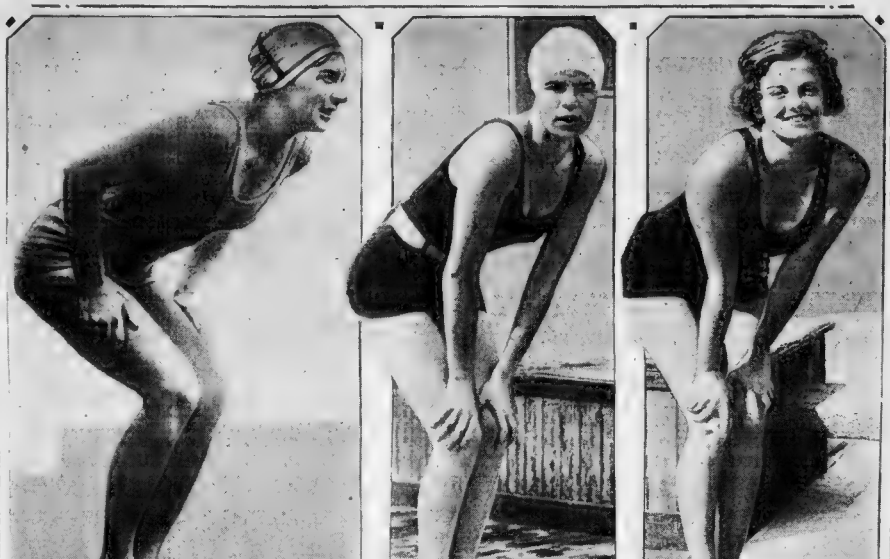
Harry Oliver and Perk Galbraith, the veteran wings, and Marty Barry, who came from nowhere to win himself a regular berth, will again for the Bruins against Detroit.

Manager Jack Adams will send in Cecil Dobbs Goodfellow and Carson Cooper to oppose the Boston first line. As usual, the fireworks will probably start as soon as Cooney Weiland, Dit Clapper and Dutch Gainor step on the playing surface. The Weiland line is one of the smartest and the best scoring trio in the N. H. L. They will be followed by Bill Carson, Harry Connor and Mickie MacKay.

Herbie Lewis, Larry Aurie and Jimmie Herberts will be the Detroit front line replacements, while Musty Hughes will relieve Reg Noble and "Shorty" Blackburn.

Before the game, the Bruins will be presented with traveling bags by the Blue Line Club, a recently formed organization of rooters.

MERMAIDS SET NEW MARKS IN MIAMI POOL



Helene Madison —Asso. Press photo. Agnes Geraghty —International Newsreel Photos— Josephine McKim

Miss Helen Madison, Seattle, Wash., 150,220-yard and 200-meter record holder, Miss Agnes Geraghty, New York, world's breast-stroke champion, and Miss Josephine McKinn, Los Angeles, are three of the outstanding stars competing in the National A. A. U. women's indoor swimming championship meet at Miami Miss Madison broke the 100-meter record in a solo race against time. She covered the route in 1 minute 8 seconds, 1 2-5 seconds better than the former mark. Miss Mckim cut 9 2-5 seconds from the former record for 300 yards, free style.

ROOKIES MAY WIN BERTHS IN OUTFIELD

By JOE CASHMAN

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 15—Not one of the regular Red Sox outfielders of last season is now rated as a first-stringer.

Backing up the veteran pitchers and infielders in the opening game of the series with Mobile, here this afternoon, will be Joe Cicero, Tom Oliver and Jack Winsett, all rookies.

The 1929 garden trio of Scarrit Rothrock and Barrett will toil with the subs in the second game tomorrow.

Manager Heine Wagner warns that the ratings must not be taken to mean that he regards the new comers as better outfielders than the old timers.

Cicero Has Improved Greatly in Past Two Years

"Cicero," says the pilot, "has improved more in two years than any other player I have seen during my 30 years of connection with the game.

"I can hardly believe he is the same kid who reported to us in the spring of 1927.

"All he could do then was hit a long drive occasionally. He didn't know anything about the game, couldn't move off a dime and didn't know what to do with a ball when he got one.

"To be frank, I didn't think he would ever make the grade. I certainly would have bet the family jewels that if he did, it wouldn't be for several years.

"He fooled me completely. Why he is a better player today than the average youth who breaks in with 100 per cent more ability and brains than he has becomes in five years."

Sox Rookie One of Hardest Hitters in Game, Says Wagner

"Right now he is one of the hardest hitters in the game. I don't know where he gets the strength to hit the ball so hard and far. It is amazing.

"He can hold his own in the field, too. He is much faster than he used to be, gets a fine jump on the ball covers a lot of ground and is a good judge of flies, especially those which require him to run back.

"Naturally, he still has a lot to learn, just as has any kid of his age and experience. He may not even be quite enough advanced to hold down a big league berth this season.

"In the not too distant future, though, I look for him to be an outstanding player."

And talking about Oliver, Heine rambles on like this.

"Every move Oliver makes both at bat and in the field indicates that he is a classy player.

"He's extremely fast and has acquired the knack of knowing where a ball is going as soon as it leaves the bat. The result is that he is under most balls long before they start to come down and rarely misses one. He's a real ball hawk. And how he can throw.

"He is not such a long hitter, but he looks good enough to bat .300 or better in any league. He doesn't swing at a ball until the last minute, which makes him a very hard man to fool."

Youngsters May Displace Veterans in Outfield

"I can't understand why he was not picked up long before this."

We ask you can we be blamed for thinking at this time Wagner intends to start the season with Cicero and Oliver after hearing these opinions?

Winsett hasn't been around long enough to show his true ability. He will need another year or two of seasoning.

So one of last season's regular outfielders may have his job at the start of the coming campaign. But no more than one, according to present indications.

Springfield Qualifies 10 Swimmers

Brunswick, Me., March 15 (AP)—Springfield Y. M. C. A. College led the eight institutions entered in the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Championships with 10 men qualified for the finals in the Bowdoin pool today. Eighty men competed in the preliminaries.

Brown had eight men eligible. Amherst, M. I. T. and Worcester Tech four apiece. Wesleyan and Bowdoin three each and Williams two men. Two new records were set.

John Ospowich of Worcester Tech, brother of Albin Ospowich, won the first heat of the 440-yard swim in five minutes, 43 seconds, establishing a new New England Intercollegiate record for the event.

Another record was set in the 300-yard medley swim by Sutter of Brown, who was timed in four minutes, 21 1-5 seconds, breaking the mark held by Schott of Williams of four minutes, 28 2-5 seconds.

Hall of Brown swam the 50-yard dash in 35 seconds in the first heat, within a fifth of a second of the mark of 34 4-5 seconds held by Rardo of Springfield. The Brown relay team was disqualified in the medley relay.

Brother of Braves' Second Baseman Dies

Francis X. Maguire, brother of Freddy Maguire, the Braves second baseman, now in training at St. Petersburg, Florida, died last night at his home on 13 Holiday st., Dorchester, from a septic sore throat. He was 38 years old.

He leaves a wife and four children, Frank, 16; Evelyn, 14; Charles, 11; and Eleanor, 4.

Albert Maguire, sub-master at English high school, Thomas J. Maguire and George Maguire are other brothers of the deceased. He left two sisters, Catherine and Marion.

No word was known today as to whether or not Freddy Maguire would ask leave of absence from the Tribal training camp in order to attend His brother's funeral.

YACHTSMEN TO CELEBRATE

When visitors gather this summer along the Massachusetts coast to be in on the tercentenary celebration of the Bay State's founding, they will be treated to a varied card on the water.

Yachtsmen are determined to celebrate the tercentenary, and plans are being rapidly formulated for regattas in various resort towns along the coast, with Boston and Marblehead in the van.

In Boston harbor, the tercentenary events will be run off by the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Club Association, headed by George H. Voter.

These will include, tentatively, two days of speed boat racing, two days of sailing races, a daylight marine parade and an evening pageant and illumination.

At Marblehead the tercentenary celebration on the water may become part of Race Week, with one of the yacht clubs giving up a day of its allotment for the purpose.

The tercentenary events will make up for some gaps in programs occasioned this year by the America Cup series.

Cup Series Causes Change in Annual Cruise Date

"The cup series has caused already the dates of Marblehead's mid-summer series to be revised and the annual cruise of the Eastern Yacht Club to be put off.

However, the cruise postponement is not entirely caused by the America series. It has been increasingly difficult each year for the Eastern to gather major fleets for its cruises.

Most of the larger racing craft are now owned on the Sound and although their owners are with few exceptions members of the club they have lately seemed less and less anxious to bring their craft north of Cape Cod.

The center of yacht racing will be at Newport this year, of course, and Northern clubs will run more cruising.

His new Corsair, building at the Bath Iron Works, has received another visit from J. Pierpont Morgan and it is understood that she will be launched the latter part of the month.

She is 343 feet long and carries a 12-ton funnel, which already has been set.

Dempsey to Fight If He Can Get Into Shape

Detroit, March 15—Jack Dempsey said he intends to go into training as soon as he completes the theatrical tour in which he is engaged at present.

"If I find I can get into proper condition," said the ex-heavyweight champion, "I will be ready to meet the outstanding claimant of the title."

Physical condition, rather than financial considerations, will determine his future course, Dempsey asserted. "It won't make any difference if I have $1,000,000 or haven't a dime," he said, "if I can't get back into condition, I will remain retired."

INDRISANO TO BOX DUNDEE

The welterweight class, so long dormant, is bouncing back into popularity, and Johnny Indrisano of East Boston is the chief usher.

Next Friday night, the East Boston shadow will take the third step in his come-back campaign when he meets Vince Dundee of Baltimore, brother of the former welterweight champion, in the 10-round main bout at the Garden.

Indrisano has been nothing short of brilliant in his come-back campaign. He opened it in Brooklyn by flattening Steve Gotch in seven rounds. He continued it at the Garden by dazzling the hard-hitting Sergt. Sammy Baker in 10 rounds. He carried on by overwhelming Clyde Hull in another 10-round battle at the Garden.

Next Friday night, he will meet the hardest test of his career. Boxing men rate Vince Dundee as a greater fighter than his brother, Joe.

VETO PLAYOFF IN H-Y HOCKEY

Harvard and Yale have decided to let the hockey championship of the colleges go by the boards. Or rather, Harvard decided and Yale naturally had to agree.

The Harvard Athletic Association announced that it had been judged wise not to prolong the season, to let it end with a victory for each team, and that famous 90-minute tie.

It was apparent that Yale, which had not been beaten until Harvard pulled the big surprise in the first game at New Haven, was anxious to play off the championship in New York. A win would have put the seal on the greatest season in all Yale hockey.

But the Harvard players, all of whom are needed on the baseball, football and track squads, naturally were satisfied with a tie. They went into the series very much on the short end, and their great showing made the year a perfect success.

Collins Favored to Win Billiard Title

St. Louis, March 15 (AP)—Percy Collins, of Chicago, a favorite when the national amateur 182 balkline billiard tournament got under way here last Monday, was still in that role today with the final match scheduled for this afternoon.

Collins was the only player to go undefeated in their first four matches.

Appleby's defeat of Collins today would make a triple tie for the title, as Ray V. Fessenden, the Madison, Wis., contractor who is defending his crown, has lost only to Collins.

Canzoneri Flashes Old Form to Win

New York, March 15 (AP)—Tony Canzoneri, former featherweight champion, has confounded fistic experts who were ready to write "finish" to the gallant little Italian's career as a top-rank lightweight.

Flashing all his old-time heavy skill, Canzoneri gave Stanislaus Loayza of Chile one of the worst beatings of his career in a 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden last night. Canzoneri won every round.

Braves Play Yankees Today

By BILL CONNELL

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 15—Babe Ruth and the hard-hitting Yankees come to Waterfront Park today for the first go of a two-game series with the Braves.

After their victory over the World's Champion Athletics on Friday, the Braves are cocky and ready to go after the New York team.

Three times this year the Braves battled the clan of Shawkey at Waterfront Park. Once the Braves beat out the Yanks, lost twice and the other scheduled game between the teams was rained out.

The Gothamites are fighting hard this year and have a little added drive in the presence of two capable new men, Ben Chapman on third and Allen Cooke in left field. Both of these players are good in the field and can hit up to the high standard set by slugging Yank teams of recent years.

While some experts have picked the Athletics to come through again this season, Bob Shawkey figures that his club will prove much harder to defeat this year than it was in '29. And the Yanks were no setups for any team one year back.

The Yanks know they must play great ball to edge out the A's and Browns and one or two others.

Trainer Says Yanks in Better Shape This Year

Doc Painter, last year's trainer of the Braves, says the Yanks are in better shape this year than they have been for several seasons back. The doctor is training the team and should know their present condition. So his statement, that the Yanks are ready to stage a pennant drive, bears weight.

Babe Ruth is in splendid condition. He is down finer than he has been at this date of the training sieges of some years back. The trainer of the Yanks has figured that Ruth's present physical condition is better than a month ahead of his development this time last year.

The Bam is down fine enough right now to take things a bit easy. In Friday's practice session Babe was not required to do any hard work at all.

Sonnenberg Knocks Out Joe Devito

Toronto, Ont., March 14 (AP)—Gus Sonnenberg, Easton, knocked out Joe Devito, Italian wrestling champion, here tonight. Sonnenberg crashed the Italian to the mat with a backward slam, shortly after Devito had climbed back into the ring after being hurled out by the Boston grappler.

Phil Goes Back Nobody Cares Army and Navy

PHILLUP SCOTT is sailing back to England, and nobody cares if he never comes back—Phillup will protest to the British Board of Boxing Control about the Miami thing; and that will get him just as far as his claim of foul in the same Miami thing the Sweoning Swan emitted a wild bleat just before he left, and that, probably, soured him with the few remaining natives who thought he got the worst of it, down where the zenhyrs sway the palms.

Phillup was responsible for the foul epidemic that swept boxing—the smart managers saw him get away with it and told their boys to go out and do likewise. If they were getting licked now that Phil has departed, the dirtiest may shate how blows nowadays do not cripple or ruin boxers, they are too well protected the whole gag is just a stall to get the money with as little effort as possible—it may be smart, but it also may result in there being no money around to g-t but the managers never think of that part of it.

THE Army and Navy may be persuaded to resume football war at the World's Fair in Chicago. That would be Fair enough.

A WELL known pool, based on the treasury balance and the clearings, is the most popular form of gambling this country has known—the boys who are lucky can win 37 bucks for a nickel—those odds would attract anybody—it's a small change proposition, but it drags in more money than baseball pools or lotteries ever did—it's more honest than most of things, because the backers can't play half with the numbers—but they have a tremendous edge in the odds, as is to be expected—the smart working man and girl have the natural urge to gamble; when they can get the thrill for a nickel or a dime, there's no great harm done—it gives walking home something of a kick—where reformers learn that laws and sleuths cannot curb human tendency, a great step will have been made toward moral progress.

THE rookie does not care about
He lacks a knowledge of the game
He knows himself is not among
The stars of baseball's hall of fame.
And cuts, and cuts, and cuts.

A BALL player gets his bats free but has to pay for his spiked shoes; and they cost $20 a copy; all his expenses are paid on the road, but he's on his own when his team is at home.

—Jim Maloney hates to talk fight—Al Simmons, Athletic slugger, will not discuss baseball—one never could get a word about football out of Eddie Casey—sport has many a Cal Coolidge—visiting hockey players pay a three per cent of the gate in the big league—that was put into the rules by the Canadians, who thought the game would not go in these U. S. A. and they would have been schooled through Saskatchewan ever since the Bruins started in—Al Demaret has words 100 football speeches since he cracked his spine, and is ready for the Chautauqua circuit.

BOXING has been tough enough recently in these parts. But with two clubs running the same night, it will be much worse. The boys should get together.

DID you know that Stella Walsh, girl sprint marvel, has a real Polish name as long as this question—that Hype Igoe was offered $100 for the stub of a ringside seat for the Corbett-Sullivan fight, and refused to sell—that Earl Sande intends to ride at the eastern tracks this season—that the Miami rumpus may steam up a return Scott-Sharkey row in London—that Andy Callaghan is tackling the toughest customer in his division in Billy Wallace—that Fred Mitchell has the best looking ball club at Harvard that has come along in quite a stretch—that Tony Plansky could make himself a lot of money in the wrestling racket—that paying the tax, which they collect extra, tears the hearts of the boxing promoters.

HARVARD and Yale will not play off their hockey tie, though the show would draw a $25,000 gate here, or in New York. The college boys put on their sports for fun and excitement only.

Bouquillon Rocked Carnera With Hard Right to Jaw

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

FRENCHMAN READY FOR MONTE

MOISE BOUQUILLON, heavyweight champion of France, who clashes with Joe Monte, Brockton's hard-hitting young champion, next Monday night in the main bout of 10 rounds at the Boston Arena, went through nine fast rounds yesterday in a local gym, and looked like all the nice things that have been written about him. Bouquillon, packs a punch like a shot from an artillery rifle.

He battered his sparring partners fiercely and had all three of them on the floor at least once. His main stock in trade is a pulverizing right-hand punch that resembles very closely that of Georges Carpentier, the game Frenchman who came so near to knocking Jack Dempsey.

Ring birds were impressed by Bouquillon's work, and most of them were quick to predict that he would upset Brockton's pride Monday night.

Monte continued training at Toland's gym, pummeling his sparmates as they have not been pummeled before. Monte's heart and soul is set on a victory over the Frenchman, for he realizes that big money lours are before him if he can get by Bouquillon.

Bouquillon in Hard Bout With Carnera

Bouquillon has met Primo Carnera, the ponderous Italian. The bout took place in Paris seven months ago and was as sensational as any ever witnessed in Europe. It went 10 rounds. In the fifth frame Bouquillon almost stopped Carnera with a right to the jaw.

Jim Maloney, although a winner over Bouquillon in the recent "Battles of the Palms," in Miami, was rocked more than once by the Frenchman. In fact, Maloney admitted afterwards that Bouquillon punched as hard as any man he had ever met. Maloney was not assured of victory until he had opened up a big cut over Bouquillon's left eye that blinded the game son of France for the remainder of the bout.

Col Bob McKirdy has signed his strongest preliminary card of the year to support this bout. He also announces that there will be no change in prices, the usual $2 down to $1 scale prevailing.

Bouquillon was to continue training at Toland's gym this afternoon, and Monte will go through his paces at the same place at a later hour.

Richards and Nadeau in Semifinal

Featuring the preliminary card will be an eight rounder between Phil Richards, English welterweight, and Young Nadeau, promising young Somersworth, N. H., boy. They met at the Arena about last week and their bout was a bitter battle until it was stopped at the end of the sixth round to enable the main event to start at 10 p. m.

Leslie Baker, popular Watertown welter who is pointing for a bout with Al Mello, meets Mickey Mc-Cann of New London in the feature four rounder.

Other fours will bring together the following boys: Joe O'Donnell, Roxbury, vs. Frank Hershby, Lynn; Arthur Nadeau, Somersworth, vs. Jack Dempsey, North End; Jack Norton, Roxbury, vs. Johnny Gillis, East Boston; Ray Munroe, East Boston, vs. Pat McLaughlin, Charlestown, and Ug Gibson, Revere, vs. Gus Brown, Canton.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

You golfers are familiar with that oft-played record, "Relax, man, relax," but how can a stiff-muscled golfer relax when there is no relaxation in his mind? To try to relax muscles when there is no mental relaxation is to attempt the impossible. As I said before, golf is a reaction. Physical relaxation, or the kind and degree of relaxation called for in the golf swing, springs quickly and naturally from a correct mental relaxation, associates at once, and continuously, with the player who sees himself at mental ease toward the game. So there is your relax and you cannot relax until you can make good golf swings. You will note here that this is not quite the paradox it would seem to be, since when you get it into halves you see your out. You cannot make good golf swings until you can relax—and you can relax only when your mind is relaxed in your golfing and with regard to your golfing abilities. Too much concern about the mechanical details leads away from that mental goal, not toward it.

ZARYNOFF VS. MALCEWICZ

Joe Malcewicz, Utica Panther and perhaps the cleverest heavyweight in the world, was signed to meet Count Zarynoff of Russia in the semi-final to the Gus Sonnenberg Henri Diglane world's championship match in the Arena next Thursday night.

Zarynoff has been a panic all through New England this year with his amazing acrobatic feats and colorful personality. He and Malcewicz should present the fastest and most sensational bout held here this season.

Sonnenberg will arrive back from the west Wednesday noon tomorrow morning, and will make his head quarters in and around Boston for the next few weeks. Out in the west he Gus Great is still packing them in, for he is the greatest drawing card the sport has ever known.

Like Dempsey, he packs everything into a terrific attack, featured by his famous flying tackle. That football tackle won him the title on January 4, 1926, and has kept him undefeated ever since that historic moment.

MR. BOSTON

Stanley Stasiak Asks Bout With Carnera

MR. BOSTON was greeted by a roar when he stepped into Paul Bowser's office.

Stanley Stasiak, Lion of Poland, pushed his way through flock of wrestlers and patted the veteran.

They'll never get me to go to Miami again," shouted Stanley as he displayed great indignation. "Some pirate charged me $8 a day to sleep in a little, dingy room. As I had to stay there for five days, the sock was $40. And meals were extra.

Jack Conway

"I took a short ride in a taxi, and the bandit at the wheel demanded $3. I should have thrown him and his junk car into the ocean."

"You got off easy," advised Mr. Boston. "I know plenty of birds who paid $20 to $50 for a room in one of the flossy hotels. Tom Mix told me he kicked in with $105 a day for two rooms and his meals were extra."

"That's all history now," went on Stasiak. "What I now want is a bout with this big cigar Carnera. He's not much taller than me and I figure I can handle him. I don't care what rules we meet under. You know I once was a boxer. So if he wishes we shall fight. I'd also agree to rough and ready rules which would allow fighting, wrestling and what you wish.

Lion Boxed With Wills and Jack Dempsey

"TEN years ago I worked out with Harry Wills. He is a nice fellow and didn't mar my beauty in the least.

"Somebody then bidded me into joining Jack Dempsey's camp. What a rough ring that Dempsey is. The first day I worked with him he busted me on the nose with a left hook and the next I ain't any good for a couple of months.

"This Carnera, however, isn't any Dempsey. I think I can stiffen all the birds he has met so far. If I can get a shot at the Italian giant, you will at least see a fight."

Bowser Rates Diglane as Real Headliner

PAUL BOWSER interrupted Stasiak's broadcast.

"I'm not the least bit interested in Carnera," chirped Paul, "as I'm not a boxing promoter. Of course, if Primo were to turn wrestler, and they tell me that a lot of fighters are better wrestlers than boxers, I'd give him a tumble.

"I just took a peek at Henri Diglane, who is training for his world's championship mat bout with Gus Sonnenberg, which will be staged at the Arena on next Thursday night. This Diglane has a build as everybody has often shot against him and he feels he will take Gus' title away from him.

"Sonnenberg, when he was rough as Sonnenberg and knows more about the fine points of the game than the finest college football star. I look for quite a scrap next Thursday night, and I wouldn't be taken by surprise if a new champion is crowned."

Gus Wilson in Town With Moise Bouquillon

GUS WILSON, who first came to this country as trainer of Georges Carpentier, and who later became identified with Jack Dempsey in the same capacity, is here as manager of Moise Bouquillon, French heavyweight, who collides with Joe Monte in a ten-round bout at the Arena on Monday night.

"Bouquillon is one of the most promising heavyweights in the world," declared Wilson, who is a keen judge of boxers. "Moise only weighs 186 pounds which is big enough for any heavyweight. Carpentier rarely went over 180 pounds and he could knock out any man in the world. He and Cuddy clip on the chin with his famous right duke. Dempsey [illegible] ended 153 pounds the day at Toledo he flattened the gigantic Jess Willard.

"Bouquillon is 23 years of age and so has youth on his side. He is a aggressive, prominent American type star known throughout the world as 'Helen the Second,' was ordered by her doctor today to cancel all tennis engagements for the season here. She is suffering from a severe sore throat, and is running a high temperature.

Paulin Beats Nadeau

Bridgeport, Ct., March 15—George Paulin, 115, Connecticut flyweight champion, decisively outpointed Buster Nadeau, 115, of Holyoke, Mass., in a feature 10-round bout here.

Daily Health Hint for Readers

ALWAYS seek the cause for a "coated" tongue. It may be due to a mouth infection that requires attention or to a chronic stomach or intestinal trouble. There is always a reason. A physician can tell you and one should be consulted when coated tongue appears.

HEART BALM SEEMS TO HAVE GONE OUT OF DATE

Women on Juries Ridicule Modern Girl's Plea

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

IT is the opinion of bar associations the country over that the advent of women jurors has killed the breach of promise industry. In England, it is even in worse shape than here—of the 700 legal actions of all kinds on a recent court list only eight raised the question of a broken promise to marry. And only two such cases received any damages at all during the past year in England.

Beatrice Fairfax

It is the old case of not having your cake and eating it, too. A modern girl who prides herself on being a good sport can't fall back on the pastimes of a past age—hobby prizes they might almost be called handed out to women when they were regarded as "dependents" by their men folk and the law held them to be irresponsible near-children.

There are exceptions to every rule. A woman who finds herself without sufficient protection as the result of a common law marriage and has children whose future is at stake, is entitled to assistance under any label—breach of promise or not.

But for a capable modern girl who has suffered nothing worse than the loss of a few ideals, to go into court as the victim of a broken heart means more than likely a total eclipse as far as her future is concerned. The chances are—with women jurors in the box—she'll get nothing out of the suit but ridicule and experience.

Files of old weeklies have a different story to tell. Illustrations show ladies in hoopskirts and bustles crying themselves into fortunes from $2000 to $50,000. The jury—composed of twelve good men and true—"was moved to tears" and not infrequently the presiding judge's "eyes were moist," according to the text.

But the woman juror of today is made of sterner stuff. She does not mingle her tears with the plaintiff's—worse, she almost invariably votes against damages.

I'd almost forgotten there were such things as breach of promise suits. It's been so long since I've heard of a really dramatic one but this morning a mail brings an inquiry. A girl working in a downtown office building and making a very good salary became acquainted with a young man by riding in the same elevator with him.

If he missed her, he'd wait. If she missed him, she'd wait—then they spoke. Soon they were dining together, going to the movies and he was writing letters beginning "Dear Little Wife."

She began to think about a trousseau and the honeymoon. She even suggested contributing $200 toward a car so that they could take a motor trip after they were married. This terrified the young man who broke down, even wept and confessed he was "dated" for another honeymoon and had been engaged to a girl in his home town all along, and that the elevator romance had seemed to him "just a lark."

But the girl is broken-hearted. She is in a law firm and without disclosing that it was her own story, consulted one of the firm who told her the "young lady" had an excellent case.

Then she wrote to me. My advice is to burn the contemptible young man's letters and be thankful she made a lucky escape. I only wish that the poor home town girl could be saved from so unfortunate a marriage.

The Eyes of Love -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

GLORIETTE had "eyes of love." Defective vision, you would say

She saw a great big boy, with character and shoulders fit to meet the world with and show it its place. Dazzled by the light of love in her eyes, blundering blissfully in its amber glow-and-glitter, she tied her wagon to what she thought was a star, as a girl is urged to do, and found the star just a bit of clod. And herself contemplating the rest of her life in its company.

Star-shine! It was just the polish on his hair. Pride! It was but the boastful puffing of a chest and heart too small to ever really grow. Good temper and wit! It came out that it was only clowning that never tired.

Gloriette wondered, as the star slipped from the sky, the glow faded, the vision that she had set up for herself to bring bouquets shrank from a "big" man to a "little" one—little in soul—how she could have ever seen him as anything but what he was. Looked past and through him to a splendid figure that was only a dream fashioned by herself, with blind eyes, out of the stuff that girls' hopes and beliefs are made of. The rest of the world had stood around at the wedding and wondered that, too!

A aunts and uncles, moms and dads, younger brothers and sisters, and other young things, marvel at the man that Glorioux Gloriette adores and means to take. And even other men stand aghast at the man "a nice girl will fall in love with!"

Said a big man and good one, a kind one and splendid one, one day to the artist, "My gal thought him a musician—but he was only a 'crooner'!"

The father saw the "crooner," saw the lack of forehead and the near-set eyes, but "Eyes of Love" was listening to the "Moonlight Sonata" played by Eros in the dark.

Exercise Is Necessary

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
U. S. Senator from New York, Former Health Commissioner

BEN JONSON, that inimitable 16th century writer, dramatist, poet, and friend of Shakespeare, wrote these words

"Oh, Health! Health! the blessing of the rich!

"The riches of the poor!

"Who can buy thee at too dear a rate, were there is no enjoying the world without thee?"

Health is for rich and poor so long as the laws of health are followed. Little does one enjoy the world when health is gone.

What can be done to build for health? You cannot have good health without plenty of physical exercise. Yet the great insurance companies tell us that physical examinations of thousands of persons reveal the fact that human muscles are growing flabby. In this country, and in other countries, at the beginning of the World War, the fact was found, never before realized, that thousands of young men were unfit for service because of flabby muscles, and other physical defects.

Most of the things that our ancestors had were acquired through hard work. They worked for what we merely press the button to get. In primitive times man dug in the ground, climbed trees and hunted game and animals. He had to be on the defensive against attacks of the enemy.

Today, labor-saving devices are increasing constantly. In consequence, most persons are not getting the necessary exercise to maintain good health. They go without it unless they plan for it in the days program.

It is a good thing to find some form of physical play, some form of relaxation from which pleasure and profit are derived.

It is well to have a physical examination once a year, so that you may regulate your exercise to your physical powers.

A Dish a Day

EVERY so often I receive a request for a New York Clam Chowder, and I am bound to say that I do think it rivals our own New England brand. There used to be a restaurant in Nantasket that served it years ago but alas! I don't know of a place nearer than Rhode Island where you will find this extremely delicious fish dish. Here is the secret of its making—with my blessing:

Martha Lee

NEW YORK CLAM CHOWDER

INGREDIENTS

1 qt. clams.
¼-inch cube fat salt pork.
1 sliced onion.
½ cup cold water.
2 cups potatoes cut in ¾-inch cubes.
2 cups boiling water.
2 cups stewed and strained tomatoes.
1 cup canned corn.
½ tsp. soda.
1 cup scalded milk.
1 cup scalded cream.
2 tbsps. butter.
8 common crackers.
Salt and pepper.

METHOD

Cook pork with onions and cold water 10 minutes; drain, and reserve liquor. Work clams and reserve liquor. Parboil potatoes 5 minutes, and drain. To potatoes add reserved liquors, hard part of clams finely chopped, and boiling water. When potatoes are nearly done, add tomatoes, corn, soda, soft part of clams, milk, cream and butter.

Season with salt and pepper. Split crackers, soak in cold milk to moisten, and reheat in chowder.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

3-Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

OVER in the Near East may still be found much of the bizarre and unusual which, so many travelers assert, has gone from the world with the development of time-spanning methods of communication—the radio, airplanes, ocean greyhounds, railways which push their steel fingers into all of the out-of-the-way places of the earth. They are right—to a degree. The world has lost much of its picturesqueness as "civilization" tends to become universal.

I am thinking now of Sanaa, the Moslem capital of Yemen, which borders the Red Sea in southwestern Arabia.

The Moslem city of Sanaa is interesting in itself. The wealthier merchants and the governing officials have beautiful homes, gorgeous gardens, and surrounded by their many servants, lead a life which is full of happiness—those pleasures which they have known for generations, the eating of ghat, their feasts.

But it is of the Ghetto, the Jewish quarter, that I want to tell you.

The first thing which strikes one in the Ghetto is the fact that all of the buildings are only two stories high. It is the law of the city that the Jews, in their ghetto cannot build homes of greater height. That distinction is reserved for the Moslems, the ruling class. But as one progresses further another thing slowly takes shape in the consciousness. That is the cleanliness. We of America are used to the "ghettos" of the large cities, such as New York. There they are vile-smelling streets, lurking in the windows of which bulge piles of bedding, multi-colored washing. Above all noise—angry voices, shouts, children crying or yelling.

According to the Sanaa law, the Jews must dress in a prescribed manner. The men wear blue smocks, reaching to the knees. Over this they sometimes wear a robe and sash. Their heads are shaved with the exception of short braids of hair which fall down on each side just in front of the ears. Skull caps are universal. The women wear garments like the Moslem women, gathered at the ankles. The robes which they wear are comparatively short, reaching just below the knees. Invariably they are blue. They are not veiled but throw a big kerchief or silk print over their heads, and frequently, while on the streets, they hold this across the face in a manner which becomes quite coquettish.

The Jewish-Moslem situation in this part of Arabia is queer. Both the Jews and the Moslems are of the same racial group. It is a case of brother subjugating brother, but, by and large, they are content and it would take much to drive them from their native Yemen.

Lovejoy -:- Beatrice Burton Harness

CHAPTER 55

"SOMETIMES, I think that women like that are the only happy women," Sheila said once when one of them appeared, trudging along with a baby in a blanket that was hung across her wide shoulders.

"You think that because you've never been poor," Lovejoy answered her simply. "But I have been—and it's terrible. You have to work like a house all the time. You never even sit down to a meal without thinking of the dirty dishes that you'll have to wash later on."

Joe Rossiter sent her a sarcastic smile. "Isn't that terrible?" for a woman to have to wash a few dishes! That certainly must be a tough break for her!"

On a cold, clear night, just after sunset, the lights of Minden came into view. Minden—the town that was to set her free from Tom and jealousy and worry over money!

Steve on the platform at Minden, caught Lovejoy's face between his hands and kissed her.

"This is sure a sight for sore eyes—to see you on this station platform!" he said, grinning down at her boyishly. "I'd begun to think I'd never get you here!"

He picked up her bags and they went down the platform side by side, Lovejoy's high heels clicking like castanets on the wide boards. The train moved slowly past them, its lighted windows throwing a moving pattern of gold on the ground. A white-capped chef was leaning out of a window of the dining car.

Their own waiter waved at them from a platform as the train disappeared into the deep-blue darkness of a Nevada night.

"I'll bet he's sorry to lose us!—All the tips we gave him!" Sheila called to them as they came toward her.

Lovejoy was glad when Sheila said that there was a 15-mile drive ahead of them.

"This place where I stayed wasn't exactly a hotel," she explained "It's a ranch house—the kind where they take people who don't really know. You'll love it, both of you! We can ride in the morning if you like, Lovejoy."

"Are you talking about a horseback ride?" Lovejoy asked her with alarm in her voice. "I've had heard about the wild bucking broncos of the West, and she hoped that nobody would expect her to ride one of them.

"They have some awfully good horses at Hill's," Sheila answered. "You're going to love this place Lovejoy."

At that time Lovejoy herself thought she was going to love it. That is, if she did not have to ride!

She sniffed the good, clean air as if she couldn't get enough of it. It was like a tonic after the smell of liquor and perfume and cigarettes that had been in her nostrils for the last day or two.

"You'll want to send a wire to your aunt, won't you, dear?" Steve asked her. "Let's see, I wired ahead for a car to meet us—"

As he broke a tall figure moved into the light of the musical lamppost. A tall, broad-shouldered, narrow-hipped man in tan shirt and trousers and a broad-brimmed Stetson.

"Mr Oglebay?"

"That's right," Steve told him "You the man from Hills. Here are our bags."

The cowboy picked them up and carried them easily across the station to a big, open car that was standing in the shadows beyond the station.

"Blinding, isn't he?" Sheila whispered into Lovejoy's ear as they left the town behind them and headed out into the wide vented country.

The wind was cold and Lovejoy pulled her bat-brim down and snuggled close against Steve.

This was like a dream.

"I'm not going to sit back here with you two any longer!" Sheila said suddenly. "You're so wrapped up in each other that you don't know I'm alive! Ten minutes ago I asked Lovejoy a question and I'm still waiting for her to answer it!"

Lovejoy laughed. "How could I answer it? How could I tell you that our driver is stunning-looking and Steve's right here beside me listening?"

"Well anyway, I'm leaving you flat!" And Sheila, curling her long, silk-covered legs over the front seat and dropped down beside the surprised young driver of the car.

"Want a cigarette?" Lovejoy heard her ask him, and in two minutes they were chattering like a couple of long-lost friends.

"Don't you make eyes at any of the good-looking cowboys around here while I'm down in California!" Steve whispered to Lovejoy "Remember that you belong to me now!"

Lady Should Speak First

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—When meeting an old friend you have not seen for a long time, whose place is it to stop and speak a few words, the lady or the man?

2—Is it proper to shake hands when meeting?

3—Whose place is it to offer to shake hands?

Roslindale. BERTHA.

1—It is the lady who should indicate that she wishes to stop to chat for a minute or two.

2—It would be the most natural thing in the world for two friends who have not seen each other for some time. The handshake is the natural greeting for friends who meet; it is not such a natural greeting for acquaintances or for those who are just being introduced.

3—The woman is always given the privilege of deciding about offering her hand for a handshake. The gentleman should wait until the lady offers to shake hands.

But an accustomed gentleman, one who knows the social world, watches closely to see if a man wishes to shake hands, and of course then quickly offers her hand. I say this especially from the point of view of the many foreigners who are accustomed in their homes in Europe to shake hands on more occasions than we Americans do. To them, it is the most natural thing in the world to shake hands in many cases when we Americans do not.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I am anxious to know the correct way to announce a baby's birth. That is, are cards sent to close relatives who will probably know before the card arrives through the mails?

2. Shall I put the name of the hospital on the back of the card?

S. S. M.

1. Yes, cards should be sent to relatives and friends. Even if some of these relatives and friends know of the birth before they receive the announcements, cards should be sent to them, for, if they do not receive cards and others do, they might wonder if they were deliberately omitted. It is better to take no social chances on this.

2. No. This is not necessary or in good form. If the relatives and friends wish to make a gesture of any kind, such as coming in or sending flowers or books, it is simple for them to find out your address.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please advise me as to the correct form to be used on engraved calling cards for a widow who always signs herself "Florence (Christian name)"? Is it possible to add "Mrs." and use the initial "F"?

MRS. G.

There is only one correct form for a widow to use on her visiting cards, and this is exactly the same form that she used when her husband was living. Like this:

Mrs. Henry Underwood Grey Shaw.

It would be atrocious by poor taste for the widow to use her initial name on her visiting cards, and also for her to use an initial. The name in full, used on visiting cards is one of the most formal items in the social world, and it must be correct. It is far better not to have any visiting cards than to have ones that have not abided by every jot and tittle of the rule for them.

Do You Know That—

A British built oil-electric locomotive has just created a world's record non-stop run of 500 miles in South America, on the Buenos Aires Great Southern Railway.

The Marry-Go-Round

PROBLEMS OF THE FAIR SEX

THE chief business of lawyers, these days, appears to be soldering up broken feminine hearts with gold, and salving their wounds with silver.

* * *

Many a woman thinks that she needs a tonic or a psychoanalysis, when all she needs is a little applesauce and a new heart-interest.

* * *

The woman whom a man loves, forever, is the one who never flatters him by being jealous and never bores him by being "hurt"; who never asks him to "explain"—and never wonders "where he was last night." In short, "the woman who doesn't care—much."

* * *

A deserted wife used to be an object of deep commiseration. But, these days, you never know that a woman has BEEN deserted until you receive the announcement of her next wedding.

* * *

A man who keeps head-trees in his slippers is the kind who will never allow any woman he may marry to RELAX, either.

* * *

As long as woman exists on this earth, there will be two vital problems in her life. How to manage a man—and what to do with her hair.

* * *

Science is doing so much to lengthen the lives of men, that the modern wife has little hope of collecting the insurance and looking interesting in picturesque mourning, which was sometimes the only thing that an old-fashioned wife had to look forward to.

* * *

In the game of marriage, the militant wife insists on playing captain, the wise wife prefers to play cheer-leader, and the foolish wife just plays the role of the football.

* * *

The gold-digger is merely a product of a feminine fixation, based on the theory that it is easier to get rich and famous by being loved by a man who doesn't owe you anything, than from one who does.

* * *

You can no longer judge a woman's morals by the things that hang on the wash-line.

as quickly as you could ride on a street car."

"Not long then—"

She settled back against the cushions filled with a breathless sense of happiness. Glorious to be sitting here beside Gleason, driving into the sunset. Just those two—closed away from the world like this in the cozy intimacy of the car.

They talked and laughed though what they said, why they laughed she could not afterwards have told. Beneath her thoughts ran a tingling consciousness of his nearness. She stole little shy glances at his intent profile as they rounded corners. That nose straight none of his, she had an impish impulse to run her fingers down it. Delicious laughter bubbled within her at the thought.

Her own nose sniffed eagerly at the tweedy smell of his overcoat at the smoke of his cigarette. Something thrilled in the capable way his thin brown hands grasped the wheel.

And stealing another glance up at him she was confused to meet his eyes.

"Know what I was thinking?" he asked earnestly. "I was thinking that your eyebrows are the same dark gold as a moth's wing. Sort of tan gold, you know. Yes," he nodded his head with mock solemnity, "I shall take that for my name for you. How does that suit you, Moth?"

They had laughed through sheer lightheartedness. Only when the man reluctantly turned the car about did Glea remember to look at her wrist watch.

FINDS TRADE FEELS TOUCH OF SPRING

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

A renewal of optimism is evident in many circles of business and finance. "The Business Week" finds trade has felt a touch of spring and begins to stir encouragingly. Non-ferrous metals continue further cut their deficit to about 2 per cent below last year and have at last practically caught up with 1928. Money turnover outside stock trading centers is swinging somewhat nearer last year's levels.

New England building contracts awarded in the last reported week, ended March 12, amounted to $4,409,800 according to F. W. Dodge Corp. This is above the weekly average for the year to date. The weekly average is $4,403,600.

Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. plants in Massachusetts will receive next fall the first rubber from the 50,000-acre Liberian concession planted four years ago. President Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., explains that this acreage is only one-seventh of what is required to supply his company. The new rubber crop would have been especially welcome a year or so ago, when Thomas A. Edison began his experiments in this field. The latest reports show consumption of rubber decreased so substantially that no one is now swallow does not make a spring' and the year as a whole is confidently expected to average up well.

We are informed that U. S. Leather's business has been gaining steadily, if not by leaps and bounds, since the advent of March. Shoe manufacturers are showing an increased inclination to buy with the late season.

President Ong of U. S. Leather says: "I cannot see any justification for a duty on raw materials. Forty per cent of the cattle hides used in this country are imported. We do not produce sufficient hides to take care of our requirements. The tanning industry needs a tariff but not to the extent of taking a duty on raw materials. However, a tariff is imposed on hides we must have one on leather. If this Oddie Amendment, which is before the Senate, is passed, you are going to see the hide market up and leather should go up fast."

Accumulation of income tax funds in the banking institutions in New York created a temporary over-supply of call money and this was without doubt the important factor behind the cut in the rate to 3 per cent from the first time since June, 1928. Expansion of business in some sections of this country has lifted the gloom which has been hanging over them in recent months. An important item was the general increase in February automobile registration.

Happily, all efforts to close the New England navy yards have failed, although extended over many years. Some thought the Portsmouth N. H. yard had been successfully sidetracked when it was devoted to submarine building. Provincetown on the Cape again interfered, and the submarine work proves salvation.

The French Surcouf, recently launched, latest type of submarine boat, is of 3900 tons. The twin-screw, steel, protected cruiser Raleigh, with Dewey from Portsmouth at Manila, displaced 3213 tons. The Navy Department thought it had a big job on hand when the big Raleigh came home, but you see the new submarines are bigger than the "backbone ships" of the fleet that made history on the first of May not many years ago.

Big Packers Want Freedom That Others Enjoy; Cheap Money as Tonic

—By B. C. FORBES—

NEW YORK, March 15—Employment reports are somewhat better.

Apparently, however, there has been delay in the speeding-up of construction, urged by President Hoover. Certain corporations and industries commenting privately, of course, on Washington has been attacking them vehemently and at the same time exploring them to help out the administration by providing more work. Nor ver critics complain that he has not displayed effective leadership qualities. Less biased citizens are disposed to suspend judgment until he has had a little more time to prove himself.

B. C. Forbes

It is admitted all round that the Hoover regime has not yet inspired enthusiasm. And this unquestionably has an influence upon sentiment in the higher reaches of finance and industry.

Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Wilson & Co., Cudahy & Co., the four big packers, are among those asking Washington for what they call a square deal. Ten years ago, when under governmental attack, they consented to a court decree restraining them from owning and operating stock yards, selling less than meats and meat products and operating retail stores.

The Four ask why 1196 of the 1200 meat packers in the United States should be allowed to do any or all of these things and only four packers forbidden to do it. A decade ago chain stores were comparatively few and not so powerful as they are today. Now the large chain operated two meat packing plants and a big sausage factory. A Boston packer has completed a huge smoke house to prepare its own meats. One Northwestern packer owns and operates some 80 retail stores. A Texas packer sells practically all the meat he packs through his own retail outlets. New York city has a store that cuts all its own pork.

The Chicago packers also point out that one large combination of food concerns has now taken over an important Eastern meat packing establishment and will have the power to sell a complete line of canned groceries and meats. The foreign packers are petitioning the Supreme Court to be put on the same footing as all the other food packers.

Here we see Big Business vs. Little Business. The court's decision is awaited with widespread interest.

Personals: Thomas W. Lamont, who bears the brunt of entertaining J. P. Morgan & Co., plans to sail for Europe before the end of this month. Mr. Lamont has put in a lot of work on the Bank of International Settlements project. The Young plan, which he played quite a part in preparing.

Owen D. Young has been out in the West for a fortnight and is hooked to make an important address at the University of California. He may make another talk in the Middle West on his way home. Oftener than once Mr. Young has gone far beyond the prevailing attitude of "capital" and wage earners. His attitude toward farm relief is also called radical by most financiers and old-line economists. He is not afraid to say what he thinks.

Charles E. Mitchell, back from a business - combined - with - pleasure trip in China, where the bank has extensive interests, and Bermuda, where he played a couple of rounds of golf and half-a-dozen sets of tennis daily, told the reporters he had nothing to say about mergers or anything else. He wants to get his land legs and his bearings after a absence of several weeks. Well, it is rather inclined to expect further expansion by the National City. Mitchell is so dynamically aggressive that it isn't easy to picture him jogging along in a rut.

Albert H. Wiggin is still busy on his ambitious Chase National-Equitable Trust merger. For good measure, the $85,000,000 Bankers Trust Company will be thrown in if and when the big deal goes through, as it is all probability will. One of two very important changes in high-up personnel, I understand, will be made.

Oil stocks have made several false starts in the last few years. The start made this week may prove more substantial. The very biggest companies are the best regarded.

Reduction in the York Federal Reserve rediscount rate to 2½ per cent emphasizes the anxiety of the Washington Reserve authorities to make money abundantly available at low cost for industry, business and agriculture. It was clear money which finally killed the stock boom. Cheap money, if maintained, will in time stimulate another upward movement. But monetary changes rarely have drastic effect immediately.

CURB MARKET LIST IS SOLD OFF A LITTLE

New York, March 15—Week-end liquidation was in large volume on the curb market today, and the list closed generally off a little, despite independent points of strength.

The decline in several of the utilities appeared to be hastened by professional bear selling. These issues have been somewhat depressed of late by agitation for a commission to control the electrical power companies as the Interstate Commerce Commission does the rails.

The standard group was generally weak. Standard Power & Light B was under considerable pressure and U. S. Electric Power sagged fractionally to within ½ point of its low. United Founders Holding and Investment Co. which is heavily interested in these companies dropped more than 2 points, going below 40 for the first time since its recent listing on this market. Electric Bond & Share lost nearly 2 points.

United Gas, however, was a buoyant feature rising nearly 5 points in response to a report that Electric Bond & Share had accumulated a large block of the stock, presumably in connection with merging it with Electric Power & Light, a natural gas properties. Niagara Hudson Power was also a firm spot, attracting the best support in several days. The stock rallied nearly a point.

Industrials generally eased. Among shares losing a point or so were American Chain, Warren Bros. new, and Zonite. Crocker Wheeler closed off fractionally. Ford of Canada A, however, closed up ⅝. Oils were less active. Gulf clinched a point, while Indiana and Cities Service finished fractionally lower. Investment trusts eased, Goldman Sachs losing ⅝.

AUTO OUTPUT SCHEDULE UP

Auburn, Ind., March 15—Production schedules of Auburn Automobile Company have been increased 25 per cent this week to 2000 completed cars a month, compared with production for the month of June, H. J. Faulkner, vice-president, said today.

Divisions of the company, both here and at Connersville, including the Central Manufacturing Company, coach building unit at Connersville, will make a proportionate addition to the new schedule this week and further increases may be made shortly, Mr. Faulkner indicated.

"We entered March with unfilled orders totalling twice the number we had at the beginning of February," Mr. Faulkner said. "Orders coming in at present are at the rate of more than 100 cars a day."

Reports from dealers indicate that the remaining spring months will witness an even greater industry, and we are preparing to take care of it with no delay in shipments. In fact, dealers' stocks are so low that it looks very much as though we would be in an oversold condition during the spring."

Beauties Get Registered Key Chains

Art Kahn, master of ceremonies, presenting Boston Evening American registered key chains to members of the cast of the stage presentation now showing at the Publix Metropolitan Theater. (Staff photo.)

WOMEN EAGER FOR KEY CHAINS

Advantages of being an "early bird" were again demonstrated at the Metropolitan Theater when the first 250 women who entered the playhouse were presented with registered key chains from the Boston Evening American Loser's Service Bureau.

These chains, which are being given away in connection with the personal appearance of Martha Lee at the Metropolitan, each bear a number which is registered by the loser's bureau. Should one of the chains be lost, the finder is able to return it through the Boston Evening American by means of this registered number.

On the stage, Martha Lee is appearing daily at the invitation of the Metropolitan. She is also the featured player in a delightful domestic comedy, "The Way to a Man's Heart," which is shown daily. Martha Lee appeared today at the theater at 10:30 and she will appear there on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 11:15 each morning. The feature picture at the Metropolitan is "Sarah and Son," with Ruth Chatterton. It is a Paramount all-talking picture.

Asks Police to Curb Joker

Brockton, March 15—Michael Dorgan of Jacob st., this city, has appealed to the police to free him from tricks of a practical joker.

For several days there has been a procession of undertakers, ambulances, grocery men and florists calling at the Dorgan home on fake calls.

The grocery men and florists all bring C. O. D. orders, with the undertakers making purely business calls. Dorgan has been sent to several places looking for positions that do not exist.

There are three in the east side section of the city who are having similar experiences, but Dorgan is the only one who has appealed to the police.

IRISH NUMBERS AT NIGHT CLUBS

Boston night clubs and dine and dance resorts are planning many extras features for St. Patrick's night, Monday. Irish songs and melodies and appropriate favors will be provided for the occasion.

Jimmy Gallagher and his Palais d'Or orchestra have arranged a banner program with many extra acts. This popular dine and dance resort on Huntington ave., continues to be the mecca in uptown frivolity.

• • •

Billy Kennedy and Eleanor Johnson are being featured at the Rendezvous, Newbury st., with an all star program of entertainment. Two shows are given nightly and there is plenty of good dance music. Monday night there will be a program of Irish songs by the Silver Kings with Joe Steele at the piano.

• • •

Ray Stewartson and his Chop Stick orchestra will offer a special program of Irish melodies on Monday night. Three floor shows are given daily.

B. U. Girls to Stage Costume Dance

Departing from the custom of a purely formal dance, Gamma Delta, women's organization at Boston University's college of liberal arts, will conduct a Mardi Gras costume dance as their annual Klatsch Kolbgium party at Longwood Towers, on April 5.

"Klatsch" is one of the outstanding events run by the girls at the B. U. college, and a large committee, headed by Fannie Bach of New Canaan, Conn., is working to make this affair a memorable one in the history of Gamma Delta.

Find Mastodon Tooth

Newark, N. J., March 15—An eight-inch fossil tooth, weighing five pounds, thought to be that of a mastodon, more than 100,000 years old, was dug up by Werner Beck while excavating in his back yard at Union township.
